lack of Industrial Disputes During Business Depression Helped, He Tells Federation of Labor Convention.

OFFERS "ONE KEY" TO SOFT COAL PROBLEM

Arges American Legion in First of Two Speeches in Boston to Promote Peace Through Active Citizenship.

BOSTON, Oct. 6.—President Hoover in two addresses here today had active promotion of peace as "team play" to reduce unemployment. The first speech was made before the national convention of the American Legion, the second before the annual session of the American Federation of Labor. He told the labor delegates that industrial stability had been insured by national co-operation and the absence of conflict between capital and labor during the business depression.

In the forenoon, he urged the delegates to expand their mission of citizenship by teaching the millions of good will toward others, proper law enforcement and discharge of duty at the job box.

"The peace of our country has never stood more assured than at this moment," he said. "The reality of our life is that the peace and good will through citizenship is the greatest guaranty of our continuance."

"Burden of Unemployment," while a "burden of unemployment," he said, "is not a burden of the laborer alone. It is a burden of the nation. It is a burden of the business community, the laborer, the manufacturer, the railway, the utility and business houses have been called upon to maintain the established order."

"Employers have spread their burden systematically. For the first time in many years a century of recurring depressions have been practically free of industrial conflict."

"We have thus had nationwide operation and team play which has ameliorated the hardship of this depression. These measures have served as a practical system of unemployment insurance."

Bituminous Coal Industry. The bituminous coal industry, he said, is one of the major industries affected by the depression and labor-saving devices. As "one key" to a solution of this problem, he advocated reduction of the "destructive competition" in this industry.

In addition to its other difficulties, he continued, "must be met the effect of the multitude of independent mine owners who, in the past, have been able to maintain a price level in the industry."

"It is not the purpose of this system," he said, "to destroy stability in an industry and reduce to poverty all within it. Its purpose is to maintain that degree of production which induces progress and protects the consumer. If our industry laws be at fault, they must be revised."

Addressing Mr. Hoover at the labor meeting, William B. Ewing, president of the labor organization, said he had always expected the chief executive's statement in favor of high wages and the reduction of the wage rate announced by the American Federation of Labor.

"The President demonstrated his confidence in the laborer and his confidence in the business community when he called a conference of representatives of labor and industry at the House last November," he added, "at that conference we agreed that peace be preserved in industry and that wages be maintained during the period of unemployment through which we were passing. The great interest which he exercised on that point served to maintain wage

DR. JULIO PRESTES, President-Elect of Brazil.

TWO WORLD SERIES TICKETS SOLD FOR $18.60 BY THIEF

A pickpocket who at noon Saturday robbed J. D. Nettleship, 7341 Auhurst avenue, of $3.20 tickets to Saturday's world series game and two to Sunday's game, sold the Sunday tickets yesterday morning for $18.60. James M. Hoff of Kirksville, Mo., bought one for $12, and when he presented it at the gate, was immediately arrested.

While detectives were questioning him, Nat Meyers, 5721 McPherson avenue, presented the other stolen ticket at the gate and also was taken into custody. He bought it from a man on Dodder street, he said, paying $6.60.

Police hurried out in search of the ticket seller, but he had gone. Then, as Hoff and Meyers were mourning the loss, not only of their money, but of a chance to see the game, William Dewitt, secretary of the Cardinals, arrived and was told of the situation. "They paid their good money to see this ball game," he said. "Let them in."

Cuban Invites Other Scientists to Attend His Experiment This Afternoon.

MATANZAS, Cuba, Oct. 6.—Prof. George Claude today was to let other men of science come into his laboratory and "watch him demonstrate his method of procuring electrical energy from the sea."

Conditions were said to be ideal for the experiment scheduled to be held late this afternoon. It was reported at the palace that President Machado and Secretary of Public Works Carlos Miguel de Caspedes might also attend.

VOTING BOOTH AT 8700 FEET

Special to the Post-Dispatch. GARMISCH, Germany, Oct. 6.—Germans who had planned to visit the Zugspitze, the country's highest mountain, on election day, were able to cast their votes in the Schneefarnhaus, 8700 feet above sea level.

This was made possible by Germany's stummzettel system. Any elector who cannot be present in his own election district on election day can secure a stummzettel, or voting certificate, which entitles him to cast his vote wherever he may be in the country.

BRAZIL PUT UNDER MARTIAL LAW AS REVOLT SPREADS

President's Decree Effective Until Dec. 31 — Follows State of Siege Order in Two States.

OUTBREAK IN PARA REPORTED TO U. S.

Washington Learns Federal Garrison Rebelled and Jailed Officers — Army Marching on Sao Paulo.

By the Associated Press. RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 6.—Owing to the gravity of the situation brought about by the revolt to the south, President Washington Luis today decreed martial law throughout Brazil until Dec. 31. Saturday the Government proclaimed a state of siege in the states of Rio Grande do Sul and Minas Geraes, where the revolt originated.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Unofficial but authoritative reports received in Washington say a revolt has broken out in Para, Brazil, many hundred miles to the north of previously reported revolutionary activity in Southern Brazil. The advice says the Federal garrison at Para had revolted late yesterday and imprisoned the commanding officers. The rebels were described as strongly entrenched in the barracks and in control of that section of the city. The reports add that state police have remained loyal to the Federal Government and fighting took place during the night, the extent of which was not determined.

By the Associated Press. MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Oct. 6.—News from Brazilian border points indicates that eight of the 21 states in Brazil are attempting to unite the Federal Government to unseat the Washington Luis and prevent the inauguration of the President-elect, Dr. Julio Prestes, on Nov. 15.

Gen. Francisco Flores da Cunha, the leader of the movement which began in the Southernmost State of Rio Grande do Sul, said today the States of Parana, Santa Catarina, Parahyba, Ceara, Rio Grande do Norte, Parahyba and Minas Geraes were also backing his campaign, with Federal troops and thousands of civilians joining the revolting forces.

The Federal Government has declared a state of siege in Rio Grande do Sul and Minas Geraes, and has appropriated $10,000,000 to put down the rebellion. The Government also is said to have offered to make peace, with the insurgents refusing all overtures.

Sao Paulo Attack Planned. Sao Paulo is understood to be planning an attack on the great seaport of Sao Paulo. His Rio Grande do Sul army, reinforced with conscripts between 21 and 35 years old, is moving northward through Santa Catarina and intends to concentrate in the State of Parana, which borders the State of Sao Paulo on the south. Then, it is said, with a railway line along its route, the army will move on the great coffee port.

At the same time the revolutionaries are consolidating their gains in all the cities of Rio Grande do Sul. Juan Francisco Pereira, who commands one of the revolutionary brigades, has gone to Porto Alegre, which was taken by rebels last week. There he will confer with revolt leaders, among them Heronilo Castro, a former naval lieutenant in charge of insurgent troops there. Castro was dismissed from the navy after the failure of a revolt aboard the battleship Sao Paulo in 1924. He lived in Uruguay until the current movement began.

Regular officers are said to be swinging to the revolutionists gradually. Some of those in charge of the Seventh Cavalry were held prisoners for a time, but now have returned to their organization and will lead it in the northward drive. Officers of the Sixth Cavalry, who were captured at Alegrete, were conducted over the Uruguayan frontier, but the rank and file of the regiment joined the revolutionary army.

Revolt Leaders' Intention. Gen. da Cunha, in a statement said that if the revolt were successful a provisional Government would be established with elections to be called eventually. He added that the insurgent army would push northward to Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo and predicted victory, saying the Rio Grande do Sul force alone numbered 40,000 troops, with many of them drawing new Federal capital.

Gen. da Cunha has been wound-

ONE STOWAWAY, POSSIBLY TWO, ON WRECKED AIRSHIP

Member of British Board Investigating R-101 Disaster Discloses Fact — Woman's Shoe Found.

POLICE ACCOUNT FOR 48 DEAD

British Expert Ascribes Crash to Rupture of Metal Frame, Indicating Trouble Before Ship Fell.

By the Associated Press. BEAUVAIS, France, Oct. 6.—While investigations were under way today into the loss of 48 lives in the wrecking of the world's largest dirigible airship, the British R-101, near here early yesterday, a warship was on its way to France to bear home to England the bodies of the victims.

Despite the most searching examinations by officials of Great Britain and France, it was announced this evening that not a single body had been identified. Everything, even to the smallest trinkets found at the scene of the disaster, were enclosed with the charred bodies and prepared for removal to Boulogne, where at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning they will be embarked for London.

French and British officials worked in closest co-operation in their efforts to solve the puzzle of how the R-101 met its fate in the darkness as it sailed over France, 50 miles north of Paris.

After Before Crash. Engineer Church of the R-101 this afternoon talked briefly, despite his painful burns. He indicated that the airship was safe when it nosed into the ground. "It was only at the last minute," he said, "that we finally saw the ship was doomed. I was on the bridge forward of the cabin when the ship, forced adrift by the wind and almost turned end for end, was pointing toward the earth. "I suddenly perceived that the craft was afloat, and a violent explosion which I heard at once threw me to the ground."

Stowaway on Board. The presence of one stowaway and the possibility of two aboard the craft was disclosed by Air Commander John Holt, who headed the British investigation committee. Whether this would change earlier figures of the number of dead and those aboard the craft was left to further official announcements. Previous figures had placed the victims at 48, one of them possibly a woman, and the whole number of persons aboard the R-101 at 54. This announcement disagreed with reports of survivors who insisted there were 68 persons aboard of whom only eight were saved, one of the rescued dying at dawn today. Police said 47 bodies had been taken over the ruins of the ship, to which list was added the name of W. G. Radcliffe, a rigger.

Delving into the twisted wreckage, the investigators' this afternoon found a woman's shoe. This gave rise to the belief that a woman was aboard. The finding of the shoe was followed by the admission by the British Air Commander that the owner of the shoe may have been one of two stowaways aboard the dirigible.

Possible Mistake in Count. Holt, who was described as directing the British investigation into the disaster, said the British Air Ministry may have made a mistake in the count of the persons aboard. He declined to make any statement concerning the catastrophe, but added that after a meeting of experts a statement might be issued tonight.

When Holt was asked whether he would say it was possible a woman may have been a stowaway, he refused to answer, saying the British Air Ministry and not himself must give out any statement concerning the causes of the disaster. Subsequently he put in a telephone call to the Air Ministry and apparently was given instructions whether to communicate anything further to the press.

The cause of the disaster was a particular point of inquiry. The big ship, flying low, had dug its nose deeply into a hillside. What caused it to fly low and by what force it was driven down against the slope were matters to be determined.

Survivors, including the pilot at the moment of the disaster, H. J. Leach, said a terrific storm was raging with high winds. Leach said the dirigible would not rise, although he gave it more gas. If there were any mechanical reasons

BOY HELD IN BURGLARY INQUIRY RELEASED UNCONDITIONALLY

High School Student Had Been Questioned on Basis of Statement by Nurse.

Herschel Combs, 18-year-old Cleveland High School student, arrested last night as a burglar, was unconditionally released today after police had failed to obtain a warrant from the Circuit Attorney's office.

Combs, who lives with his mother at 3017 Miami street, denied the charge of Miss Mildred Lovin, 19, a nurse, who identified him as the man she saw in her bedroom last Thursday. Miss Lovin said her room had been entered four times and that she awakened Thursday to find a young man on his hands and knees beside her bed. He was dressed only in a track suit, she said.

Combs had been arrested previously as a deserter from the army, having enlisted last June and left Fort Sam Houston, Tex., without leave.

ENGINEERS OF R-101 SAVED BY BURSTING OF WATER TANK

Torrent Cut Way Through Body of Craft and They Dropped to Ground and Rolled Away From Flames.

By ARNO BOSCH-FLEUROT, Paris Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World. (Copyright, 1930, by Press and Publisher Publishing Co., New York World and Post-Dispatch.) BEAUVAIS, France, Oct. 6.—I have talked with several survivors from whom the officials investigating the R-101 disaster hope to learn the reasons for the crash; but the chances of the definite cause being established seem slim. Two important statements are those of J. H. Blinks, engineer on duty at the after-power station at the time of the catastrophe, and of H. J. Leach, engineer of the Royal Airship Works, who was in the control cabin.

Blinks and Engineer A. E. Bell, whom he was relieving, were saved by a water tank bursting over their heads and cutting a way to safety through a wall of fire. Leach owes his life to his strength, which enabled him to bend a girder that pinned him to earth and then to scramble under others to escape the flames. Blinks, who only injured was the singeing of his hair, said:

"I had just come down into the after power station to relieve Bell, when he told me we were making heavy weather through thick rain and a high wind. As he was speaking we both noticed that the ship went over at a surprising angle, but quickly righted herself again."

Engines Shut Off. "We were making 65 knots at this moment when an order came through to slow down the engines. Immediately afterward the nose dipped and we got a second order to shut off the engines."

"We had hardly done so when we struck something. We could hardly believe it was the ground, as we had no idea we were so near the earth. But there was no time to think of that, as the forward engine exploded as we crashed and waves of flame came rushing aft. "Water began pouring into the cabin. We thought the first airship was in water; but a second later we saw that the water was coming from the tank overhead, which had broken and was flooding down on us."

WARRANT CHARGES ATTEMPT TO BRIBE STATE WITNESS

A warrant charging an attempt to bribe a witness was issued today against Floyd R. Hunter of Roosevelt Hotel.

Hunter was arrested yesterday after Garrett Washington, a witness for the State in a robbery case, complained to Assistant Circuit Attorney Murphy that Hunter asked him to "go easy" in testifying against Harry Graham, who is to be tried soon for the holdup of the German Cafe, 110 North Eighth street, Aug. 11, last.

The charge against Hunter is punishable by a fine of $100 to two years in prison.

Slain in Holdup; Loot 40 Cents. CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Edward Fitzgerald, 25 years old, an officer employed by the Sanitary District, was shot and killed yesterday by three robbers, though he made no resistance. The killers got 40 cents

EIGHT KILLED IN PASSENGER PLANE CRASH AT DRESDEN

All Aboard Lufthansa Ship, Bound From Berlin to Vienna, Meet Death When Craft Prepares to Glide to Landing Field.

SIX PASSENGERS, CREW OF TWO

Seven Persons Die Instantly and Other as He Is Being Taken to Hospital—Two Victims Women, One British Business Man.

By the Associated Press. BERLIN, Oct. 6.—Eight persons were killed when a Lufthansa passenger plane bound from Berlin for Vienna crashed on the moorlands near Dresden today. The plane carried a pilot, a mechanic and six passengers.

The plane was scheduled to land at Dresden at 9:50 a. m., but fell shortly before. The Lufthansa said the crash occurred just as the machine was preparing to make a gliding descent to the landing field.

The cause of the accident was not ascertained immediately. The weather was perfect for flying. There were no clouds below 2000 feet and there was visibility for six miles.

Seven of the eight occupants died instantly and the eighth as he was being taken to a hospital. Two women perished. Their names were given as Fraulein Blumel and Frau Graefe. Names of the other four dead passengers are Blackwell, Foeldes, Knittel and Kuehnelt. The pilot was Erich Pust, with long service with the Lufthansa. Max Lange was the mechanic who was killed.

The passenger, P. W. Blackwell, was a British business man of Shanghai, traveling from Hamburg to Prague. All others aboard were Germans or Austrians. Frau Graefe was the wife of the Lufthansa representative at Sofia.

The airplane was powered with one motor. Its capacity was 10 passengers and a crew of two men. It had been in service just two weeks. Other planes of the same type are used mainly as freight carriers.

The machine bore the number D-1930, which originally had been assigned to the DO-X but withdrawn when the Dornier commandor, Friedrich Christiansen, refused to pilot the giant plane if it carried a number whose digits totaled 13. The DO-X now carries the number D-1929.

SILVER VALUED AT $50,000 STOLEN IN HOLDUP OF TRUCK

Driver of Connecticut Vehicle Tied to Bumper by Five Gunmen, Who Escaped.

By the Associated Press. KILLBUCK, Conn., Oct. 6.—Five or six gunmen today held up a truck driver, bound and gagged him and escaped with bulk silver valued by police at $50,000.

The driver, Cornelius A. Wines, after being blindfolded, was tied to the front bumper of the truck. The gunmen then loaded the silver, which was bound for dealers in Providence, R. I., in at least two automobiles and escaped. The silver was said to have been shipped by the firm of Handy & Harmon of Bridgeport.

Wines told police he freed himself after about an hour and made his way to the State police barracks at Danbury.

He said the robbers got on the running board while the truck was traveling slowly up a hill.

Imperial Conference Looks on Dirigible Flight as Effort to Link Sister Countries.

By the Associated Press. LONDON, Oct. 6.—The shadow of the grievous loss sustained by the empire in destruction of the R-101 and death of 47 of the 54 persons aboard her hung over the imperial conference as its chief delegates assembled today at 10 Downing street to resume their deliberations.

Word came from the private sitting that the first act of delegates was to adopt a motion of condolence, all standing in silent tribute to the men who gave their lives in what essentially was an empire effort to perfect air communication between the sister countries of the empire.

RECORD-BREAKING CROWD AND NOISE AT BALL GAME

The 39,946 Who Paid to See Cardinals Win Yesterday
Could Give Homer
Pointers on Racket.

EASTERN DIGNITY IN THE DISCARD

Haughty Athletics Lose Their Lofty Disdain
When Redbirds Hammer
Their Star Pitcher.

By ROY ALEXANDER,
of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

Homer, a popular song writer in the cool old days before Greece went in for restaurant management, would have had a great time at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon. Of course, as a sports writer, Homer's specialty was to write like that finish scrap between Achilles and Hector with Helen in a ring-side seat. Homer knew no more about baseball than he did about a safety razor, but he was a student of sound. He coined an expression for the loud-roaring game in which college professors profess to hear the roar of the surf and the swirl of the receding wave. He got off another about the loudly clang of Apollo's silver bow that makes good students of Greek laugh every time they hear it.
That's what Homer thought of baseball. And that's why he probably would have got more thrills out of the crowd yesterday than the Cardinals trimmed the Athletics and evened up the world series at two games each, than he would have had from a sudden resurrection through the tangled traffic of Grand boulevard.
Even before the game got under way the crowd showed it was no ordinary gathering. There was a snap and a subdued roar to its rings that made the noise expert in the press box exchange glances and nods of approval.
What a Racket!
When it really found something to holler about—what a racket!
It was a beginning of a grand full-like roar. What unbelievable spontaneity! A glance at Homer's box would probably have found the old fellow tearing his beard, throwing his live in the air and grubbing for his styus all at the same time.
The first chance for some really representative cheering came in the third inning when Charlie Gelbert hit down the right field fence and the field boxes, and leaped out onto the grass. By the time Bing Miller had picked it up, Gelbert was on third base, and there was pandemonium all over the park.
As Gelbert's hit shot past Jimmy Fack at first a roar burst from the crowd with the sudden unanimity of a nitroglycerin explosion.
It continued in diapason, as the crickets say when they mean at full throttle, while the Cardinal shortstop streaked it around the base.
One searched vainly for compensation—a Bronx express with flat wheels, the cry of the big loser in an all-night poker game, the roar of a coast defense gun—but none seemed to fit.
Score Tied at 1 to 1.
And while the search for a suitable comparison went on, the same roar burst out again, louder than ever. Big Jess Haines, who had been settled down to steady pitching after a poor first inning start, seized out a single and Gelbert came trying home.
The score was tied at 1 to 1 and Haines had started on something like duplication of the third game of the 1925 series when he struck out a home run in the fourth and pitched and whitewashed
the Yankees, 4 to 0.
After the first run had been scored there were plenty of opportunities for the crowd to burst into that devastating howl of pandemonium. There was that rally in the fourth with Hafey, Blades, Wilson and the same Charlie Gelbert picking off Groves, the Athletics speedball artist, for two more runs. There were a couple of springing plays by Groves in the field. There were neat catches of line flies by Ray Blades in right field.
It was during the fourth inning that Mr. Mack's Athletics began to lose sight of that dignified disdain that makes their very appearance on a baseball field a disconcerting event to their opponents and the home-town fans.
Groves snapped the fingers of his right hand angrily when Hafey went sailing out on to the grass, and he thumped his hip with his gloved hand when Jimmy Dixie, the Athletics' third baseman, threw wide to Fox on Blades' groiner and Hafey came home with a run.
More Dignity in Discard.
In the sixth, when Bing Miller took a called third strike, the Athletics lost their dignity again. One of two of them shouted from the bench while Miller shook his bat and the forefinger and told Empire

VIEW of the wedding of MISS MARY EMMA LANDENBERGER, New York newspaper writer, and RICHARD B. SCANDRETT, nephew of Dwight W. Morrow, who recently resigned as United States Ambassador to Mexico. The officiating clergyman is THE REV. DR. S. PARKES CADMAN of New York. The wedding took place at the Scandrett summer home in Cornwall, N. Y.

Incidentally broke all Sportsman's Park records with 29,946 paid admissions—it may be recorded that some of its members, in the bleachers, had stood in line for tickets since the first St. Louis game of the series ended Saturday afternoon.
When the sun came up yesterday morning several thousand fans lined up for blocks on both sides of the park, were patiently waiting for the gates to open.
Handsome was their wait rewarded. When Joe Boley tied out to Douthitt to end the game the crowd got on its feet and gave one more good cheer, and those who were near enough ran out on the field and surrounded him. The

EX-KAISER'S SON ATTENDS NATIONALIST DEMONSTRATION

President of Steel Helms Demands Right to Re-Arm and Revision of Treaties.

By the Associated Press.
Ehrenbreitstein, Germany, Oct. 6.—Members of the Steel Helmet organization to the number of 120,000 assembled for a Nationalist demonstration. The organization, originally composed of World War veterans, but now reinforced by the Nationalist party for political purposes, met in historic Ehrenbreitstein fortress.
Franz Selote, president of the Steel Helms, declared amid enthusiastic acclaim that the organization the present situation in Germany did not signify peace but, instead, a summons to resist continued oppression, to fight for the right to re-arm, and for the revision of "infamous treaties." The Steel Helms, he said, demanded removal of the socialist dictatorship in Prussia and "all those who plunged Germany into misfortune."
Guests of honor were a delegation of Italian Fascists, a group of Norwegians and Finns, and the former Crown Prince of Germany, who was made an honorary member of the Silesian and Brandenburg Steel Helmet Societies.

MOTHER OF THREE IS KILLED WHEN AUTOS COLLIDE

Driver of Other Machine Flees After Crash but Is Captured—Second Woman Is Badly Injured.

Mrs. Ethel Riggs, 25 years old, Venice, Ill., mother of three children, died at City Hospital last night of internal injuries suffered at 7 p. m. when an automobile driven by her husband, Albert, collided with another machine at Eleventh and Angelica streets.

Gustave Duchow, 4717 Page boulevard, owner of the other machine, was arrested. He told police, Jack King of the Page boulevard address, was driving at the time.
King, arrested, admitted, police say, that he was at the wheel, but walked away after the collision because there was another traffic case pending against him. He was held for the coroner.

Mrs. Martha Lowman, also of Venice, a passenger in the Riggs machine, suffered a probable skull fracture.

Auto Victim Dies; Driver Says He Ran Into Path of Car.
Allen Fitzwater, 45, 3723 Chouteau avenue, died at Barnes Hospital yesterday of a fractured skull suffered at 12:30 a. m., when he was struck by a machine driven by Glenn Burkhardt, a druggist, 7404
Elm avenue, Maplewood. Burkhardt said he was driving west in Manchester avenue when Fitzwater ran into the path of the machine. The accident occurred in front of 4963
Manchester avenue.

A coroner's verdict of accident was returned. A policeman testified that the point at which Fitzwater was struck was dangerous for pedestrians at night, as there is only one street light in a distance of 800 feet, making it difficult for motorists to see persons in the street.

Woman and Policeman Hurt: Two Drivers Flee, Are Caught.
Albert Full, 49, 2916A Gravois avenue, was left lying in the street at Nebraska and Gravois avenues at 2:30 a. m., yesterday by the driver of an automobile which struck Full, fracturing both of his legs. Full's cries attracted residents of the neighborhood, who called police.

Mrs. Anna Wimer, 42, 3019 North Taylor avenue, suffered a fractured leg when she was struck by a machine at 3:30 p. m. as she alighted from a street car at Fifteenth and Monroe streets. The driver fled, but was caught at Fourteenth and North Market streets by Walter Trantino, a met-rologist. The driver said he was Edward Reukel Jr., 16, 3401 North Ninth street. He is held.

Motor Cycle Policeman Gilbert Kennedy, 2817 Macklind avenue, suffered a fractured leg when his motor cycle was struck by an automobile at Glasgow avenue and Madison street. The driver left the scene and was pursued by Fred Luteger, 4657 Maffitt avenue, who overtaken him in an alley in the rear of 1210 North Jefferson avenue. The man at the wheel said he was Walter Pludinski, 44, 2223 Howard street. Questioned by police, he declared Victor Nelson, 38, 2225 Howard street, was driving the car at the time of the collision.
Nelson was arrested and admitted, police say, that he turned the machine over to Pludinski after striking the policeman's motor cycle.

U.S. ENVOY TO COSTA RICA SEES WORLD SERIES GAMES

Charles C. Eberhardt on Way to Salina, Kan., for Two-Month Vacation.

Charles C. Eberhardt, United States Minister to Costa Rica, stopped in St. Louis yesterday on his way to his home at Salina, Kan., for a two-month vacation because he "just couldn't miss the World Series." He will depart after today's game.

"I don't anticipate any revolutions in Costa Rica," Eberhardt said. "I consider it the most peaceful and politically stable country in Latin America. While lower commodity prices, particularly of coffee and bananas, have resulted in a slight depression, the business situation is by no means bad. Just now the Government is occupied in co-operating with the International Highway Commission in preparing preliminary surveys for the proposed highway from the United States to Panama."

Even Costa Rica is following the World Series, Eberhardt said, baseball having spread southward to that country after having been introduced in Nicaragua by the Marines to Panama.
Eberhardt, who is 54 years old,
has been in the foreign service for 27 years. During 14 years that he was consul general at large he visited every country in the world in which the United States maintains consular service, except Spain, Portugal and South Africa.

Model Sues Over Cigarette Ads.
By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—An artist's model, Mrs. Doris Podmore, filed suit for $250,000 today against the American Tobacco Co. She says the company used her picture without consent in a cigarette advertisement and caused to be silhouetted beside it "a shadow of a grossly fat woman." She became ill, she alleges, as a result of "ridicule and contempt" to which she was subjected because of publication of the advertisement.

SAYS SHE WAS STOLEN BY INDIANS IN 1864

Mrs. Sain-Toh-Oddie-Goombi of Oklahoma Would Trace White Parentage.

By the Associated Press.
LAWTON, Ok., Oct. 6.—Mrs.
Sain-Toh-Oddie-Goombi, despite her inability to speak a word of English and her present life among 33 Kiowa Indian descendants, is convinced she is the white Millie Burgan, stolen by red-skinned raiders when she was 18 months old.

Firm in the belief of her parentage, Mrs. Goombi has appealed to the white man for aid in finding her rightful people.
The strange tale of the pale-face infant, kidnapped in 1864, and since married to three Indians, is vouched for by Harry A. Stroud, secretary of the Comanche County Historical Society.

In that year, 66 winters ago, Kiowa and Comanche warriors fell upon an isolated settlement on the Brazos River in Texas. Ten women and children, four of them Negroes, were abducted by the Comanches war chief, Little Buffalo, H. C.
Williams Sr., New Castle, Tex., then a boy, verifies the raid.

Britt Johnson, a Negro, followed the trail of the war party, seeking his family. He found the Indians encamped near Rainy Mountain in Southwestern Oklahoma. By battering supplies, Johnson obtained release of five of the captives. He was told Millie had died, and that the other four had been slain.

Indian Agency officials made numerous efforts to trace the missing baby, but after several years the story of her death was generally accepted. Only a few historians continued the investigation.

In tracing the story by Kiowa picture history, kept by George Poolaw, Kiowa historian, Stroud said many details corroborating belief that Mrs. Sain-Toh-Oddie-Goombi was the missing infant had been found.

Mrs. Goombi's marriage to three Indians, each a member of the Goombi family, tribal leaders, conformed to custom that a widow usually married a relative of her former husband, in belief he would be kinder to his stepchildren.
Descendants of the woman include nine children, 32 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.
Her last husband served as a United States Army scout, and as a result Mrs. Goombi receives a pension of $20 a month.

fontaine street car at Queens and West Florissant avenues.

At the time of the accident Mrs.

Cholera Bar at Manila Lifted.

MANILA, Oct. 6.—The cholera quarantine against Manila and Holo was lifted today, the disease having been eliminated in those cities after a flight of several weeks by health authorities. The island of Samar now is the only quarantined area in the Philippines, and it probably will be released tomorrow. The disease was described by authorities as being under control throughout the islands, only a few isolated cases having been reported last week.
Manila was quarantined about five weeks ago.

TWO MEN IN AUTO SLAIN MYSTERIOUSLY

Kansas City Officers Say Man Held Had No Part in Double Killing.

By the Associated Press.
KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 6.—Attempting to unravel the mysterious killing of Oldom L. Jeffries and Jenn Trowbridge, who were shot to death in an automobile here early yesterday, police said today new evidence tended to show that Eric V. Varble, held in connection with another shooting, had no part in the double killing.

A Negro, who told police he had witnessed the killing, said the assassin's motor car was of a different type from the car in which Varble and Miss Lillian Rice, a cigar store clerk, were riding after Varble shot and seriously wounded Floyd F.
Thompson, an insurance salesman, at Miss Rice's apartment a few hours earlier, in another section of the city.

In a statement to police after her arrest, Miss Rice implicated Varble in the double murder circumstantially. Police said she was intoxicated at the time and today repudiated her statement, declaring Varble had no part in the fatal shooting of Jeffries, 28-year-old mechanic, who formerly lived in Ottawa, Kan., and Trowbridge.

Says Shooting Was Accidental.
Varble told police he shot Thompson accidentally during a quarrel after they met at the young woman's apartment, and that he and Miss Rice then went to a roadhouse south of the city, where they drank liquor.

A few hours later they were pursued by police and overtaken when their car crashed into a telephone pole. Police said Varble attempted to dispose of a revolver from which several shots had been fired. Var-ble and Miss Rice were questioned and then held pending investigation of both shootings.

Except for the Negro's statement, police had no clues to the double killing.

Before he died, Trowbridge said a man and a woman were in the motor car from which the shots were fired.

Returned to the city late Saturday night, Varble went to the apartment of Miss Rice, 21 years old, and finding Thompson there attacked him. Thompson was struck on the head with a revolver.
The weapon was discharged and a bullet entered Thompson's chest.
Varble and Miss Rice then went on a drinking party.

SHOOTS STEPDAUGHTER AND TWO POLICEMEN

Indiana Half-Breed Wounded and Captured by Posse.

By the Associated Press.
MARION, Ind., Oct. 6.—Hazel Burden, 48-year-old half-breed Negro and Indian, was taken to the State reformatory at Pendleton for making a late yesterday afternoon shooting at his stepdaughter, Mrs. Marie Carter, 18, Anderson, Ind., and two local policemen who sought to arrest him. Burden was captured after he was shot in the hip by a member of the posse which hunted him.

Mrs. Carter was shot in the left arm. The wounded policemen were Chester Marley, 35, shot in the head, neck and back, and Lieut. Donald Everhardt, 25, shot in the right hand and arm.

Burden is the stepfather of Herbert Cameron, 14, Negro youth alleged to have been the companion of Abe Smith and Thomas Shipp, Negroes, lynched by a mob here Aug. 7 after they shot and killed Claude Deader of Fairmount, Ind., and assaulted Deader's girl companion. Cameron himself was taken from the jail by the mob but was returned without violence.

Burden was caught and disarmed by Fred Gibson, 20, deputized member of the posse. After Gibson had shattered the half-breed's right hip with a rifle shot.

Burden's wife, Vera Burden, who said they had been living apart intermittently during the past year, said Burden came into her house yesterday and that a quarrel ensued. Armed with two revolvers and a shotgun, Burden opened fire, striking his stepdaughter, Mrs. Carter.

When Lieut. Everhardt and Patrolman Marley arrived in front of the home in answer to a call from neighbors, Burden fired at them with a shotgun from a window. Both were struck and removed to a hospital. Burden ran from the house and into a cornfield.

Meanwhile, a posse headed by Chief of Police Lindenmuth arrived and began a hunt. Burden emerged and started down a railroad track, but when Lindenmuth opened fire at a distance of 700 feet with a submachine gun, he darted back into the cornfield, where he encountered Gibson. Burden fired twice with a revolver before Gibson brought him down.

The captive was taken to the Grant County Hospital, but after threats were reported to police he was removed to the reformatory.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 6.—Corruption among public officials and indifference to religion was described by speakers at the closing session of the one hundred and first semi-annual conference of the Latter Day Saints Church, which closed yesterday.

United States Senator Reed Smoot, an apostle in the church, spoke at length on the growing spirit of indifference toward all religion. He said the entire world was turning a deaf ear to religious leaders.

J. Reuben Clark, recently appointed United States Ambassador to Mexico, also addressed the gathering. He urged application of the golden rule in dealing with all nations and said he had learned to love the Mexican people since his Government position had taken him into that country.

Anthony W. Irvine, first counselor in the first presidency of the church, pleaded for "honest citizens generally and Latter Day Saints particularly to awaken to their civic responsibilities and demand integrity in public office."

CITY-COUNTY MERGER CAMPAIGN WARMS UP

Both Proponents and Opponents Active, With Vote Less Than a Month Away.

With less than a month remaining before Missouri will vote on Proposition No. 5, constitutional amendment enabling St. Louis and St. Louis County to consolidate under certain stated conditions, organizations for and against the proposal began intensive campaigns today.

The Citizens' Metropolitan Committee of 1906, sponsoring the amendment, opened headquarters today in the Chamber of Commerce Building, 511 Locust street. The Save St. Louis County League, opposing the measure, established headquarters several weeks ago at 5 South Central avenue, Clayton. The St. Louis County Farm Bureau, headed by Oscar W. Meier, which went on record as opposed to the consolidation plan, will take an active part in the out-state campaign. James E. Phillips of Ewing, Mo., Master of the Missouri Grange, announced his organization would aid the county farm bureau.

An appeal to farmers, to be made through Phillips, states: "We want the farmers of the state to know that although St. Louis County contains many small cities, it also contains more than 250,000 acres of farm land and much of its area is rural. In 1878 it was totally rural and the City of St. Louis divorced itself."

Circuit Judge Arthur V. Lashly is chairman of the Save St. Louis County League and Charles J. Hahn is publicity director.

The Citizens' Metropolitan Committee is headed by P. W. A. Yager as general chairman, with Martin J. Collins as chairman of the city unit and Mayor Eugene D. Ruth Jr. of University City heading the county unit. Scott R. DeKins will be general campaign director, assisted by George A. Marklin as publicity director.

A campaign for the amendment will be directed in the country by Jefferson R. Smith, secretary of the St. Louis County Chamber of Commerce.

DIES AFTER BEING STABBED IN MARKET STREET FIGHT

James Crowder Succumbs at City Hospital; Emil Noblot Held by Police.

James Crowder, 27-year-old mechanic, died at City Hospital last night of stab wounds suffered Saturday night in a quarrel in front of 819 Market street. He had been stabbed twice in the chest and once in the abdomen.

Witnesses of the quarrel overpowered Emil Noblot, 32 years old, a transient, whom they turned over to policemen. Crowder told police he and Noblot had decided to get a room together and were arguing over who would pay for it, when Noblot called him a vile name and he struck the man. Noblot then stabbed him, Crowder said. Police quoted Noblot as saying he did not remember what happened, and had no recollection of being disarmed after the fight by the persons who turned him over to the police. Crowder formerly roomed at 1002 Chestnut street. A sister of Springfield, Ill., took charge of his body.

MISS INGALLS FLIES WEST TO SET RECORD

Takes Off From St. Louis for California in Effort to Make Coast-to-Coast Mark.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 6.—Laura Ingalls, aviator, seeking a new women's transcontinental flight record, landed at Fairfax Airport at 12:52 p. m. today. A light rain was falling when Miss Ingalls arrived and flying conditions were poor. After receiving reports that the bad weather extended westward and that the ceiling at Wichita, Kan., was less than 500 feet, she announced that she planned to remain here overnight and take off tomorrow morning. Her total flying time since her departure from Roosevelt Field, N. Y., yesterday, was computed at 12 hours and one minute.

In an attempt to establish a coast-to-coast record for women flyers, Miss Laura Ingalls, aviation record holder, took off from Lambert-St. Louis Field at 10:31 a. m. today for Kansas City. In the event of a favorable weather report at her next stop, she will continue on to Wichita, Kan., for the night, she said.

Miss Ingalls, flying a Moth bi-plane, left Roosevelt Field at 6:15 a. m. yesterday and arrived at Lambert-St. Louis Field late yesterday afternoon, after refueling stops at Columbus, O., and Indianapolis. Her flying time for the 340 miles was 9 hours, 27 minutes.

Miss Ingalls expects to reach Los Angeles in less than 30 hours' flying time and, after a swim in the

There is no record for the coast-to-coast trip for woman pilots at this time.

After completing a transport course at the Universal Flying School here, Miss Ingalls bought the plane she is using on the present flight. She set a loop record for woman flyers with 380 loops, and later established a world record for barrel rolls, rolling her 714 times at Lambert Field during the recent endurance flight.

Miss Ingalls finished her flight in the Dixie Derby for women pilots in connection with the national Air Races last month. Miss Ingalls is 24 years old and a native of New York.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Selection of a new Secretary of Labor receiving considerable attention from President Hoover, who has several names before him, including John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America and W. N. Doak of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

Many observers think the choice lies between these two, although other names frequently crop up in the discussions.

Mr. Hoover is prepared to make known his selection shortly after the November election should Secretary Davis be successful at the time in his race for the Senate from Pennsylvania.

Anticipating victory for Davis, friends of various men in line for the labor post have been increasingly active lately. Both Doak and Lewis are Republicans and were active supporters of Mr. Hoover in the 1928 campaign.

It was reported at one time that Doak, a Virginian, was the choice of the President for his first Cabinet post.

J. L. LEWIS MENTIONED FOR LABOR SECRETARY

Choice as Davis' Successor Thought to Lie Between Mine Leader and W. N. Doak.

By the Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Selection of a new Secretary of Labor is receiving considerable attention from President Hoover, who has several names before him, including John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and W. N. Doak of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

Many observers think the choice lies between these two, although other names frequently crop up in the discussions.

Mr. Hoover is prepared to make known his selection shortly after the November election should Secretary Davis be successful at that time in his race for the Senate from Pennsylvania.

Anticipating victory for Davis, friends of various men in line for the labor post have been increasingly active lately. Both Doak and Lewis are Republicans and were active supporters of Mr. Hoover in the 1928 campaign.

It was reported at one time that Doak, a Virginian, was the choice of the President for his first Cabinet post, but at the last minute Mr. Hoover asked Davis to continue.

It is understood that Lewis would have the support of the American Federation of Labor, although not the particular candidate of that organization. There is some question whether Doak has the united support of the American Federation of Labor to which body his organization does not belong.

Another name heard in connection with the labor portfolio is Meyer Bloomfield, New York, a writer on labor affairs. He was sent to Russia as a special investigator by President Harding in 1922. However, there have been reports of opposition to him in the Senate on the ground of his activities in connection with Russia.

Davis has held the office of Secretary of Labor for almost ten years. He and Andrew W. Mellon, also of Pittsburgh, have served continuously in the Cabinet since the start of the Harding administration on March 4, 1921.

There have been only two Secretaries of Labor, the other, William B. Wilson, Pennsylvania, served in that office for eight years under President Wilson. Both Davis and Wilson were members of the American Federation of Labor.

Davis has consented to continue in office until after the election, but should he be elected, he would resign immediately to assume his new post. Davis is running to fill the Senate seat which was denied to William S. Vare, Philadelphia, by the Senate. The winner in Pennsylvania will take office immediately.

NEW PHONE SYSTEM SECOND ONLY TO BELL

Concern to Operate Throughout the World Except in U. S.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Formation of the General Telephone & Electric Corporation to manufacture apparatus and operate telephone systems throughout the world outside the United States by Theodore Gary & Co. of Kansas City, important British interests and the Trans-America Corporation, is announced.

A statement says the corporation was created "primarily for the extension and enlarged development, outside the United States, of the business of Associated Telephone & Telegraph Co., now controlled and managed by the Gary interests and British associates, with headquarters at Chicago."

Authorized capital of the new concern, which it is stated will control and operate, together with the interests sponsoring it, more telephones than any other system with the exception of the Bell System, is 5,000,000 shares of common stock. For their permanent investment the Gary interests and Trans-America are placing $20,000,000, while British and other associates are placing about $4,000,000 in common shares at $50 each.

H. L. Gary, president of Theodore Gary & Co., will become chairman of the new corporation. A. F. Adams, chairman of the Gary Co., will be president, and Elisha Walker, chairman of Trans-America, will serve as chairman of the Executive Committee.

Other members of the Executive Committee will include Jean Monnet, vice chairman of Trans-America; E. C. Blomeyer, Chicago, executive vice president of the Gary company, and Rene Pleven of Paris, all of whom will serve as vice president. The Board of Directors will include all these men, together with Sir Alexander Roger of London; W. F. Benoit, president of Automatic Electric, Inc., Chicago; W. S. McLucas, chairman of the Commerce Trust Co. of Kansas City; Frank H. Woods, Lincoln, Neb., president of the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. and chairman of the Addressograph Co. of Chicago.

Officers of the Gary company emphasized that, except for manufacturing operations at Chicago for export, the activities of the General Telephone Corporation would be outside continental United States.

The Gary company, with principal offices in Kansas City, Chicago, New York and London, owns and operates extensive telephone systems in the United States and other countries.

Formation of the corporation marks the entry of Trans-America into the field of international telephony. The corporation was formed in 1928 to bring together under a single holding company various interests of A. P. Giannini, who retired this year.

MAN WHO PUT SPORTS IN GERMAN SCHOOLS

Prof. Carl H. Becker of Berlin University in St. Louis for Address Tonight.

Prof. Carl H. Becker, who until last January was Minister of Education of the State of Prussia, and who added sports and music to the educational requirements of Germany, is in St. Louis today and will speak before the Germanistic Society tonight, at a dinner at Hotel Jefferson.

Dr. Becker, who is professor of Oriental history in the University of Berlin, is visiting American universities, having seen the three principal institutions of California and the University of Washington before coming here. He visited Washington University today and will go tonight to Chicago, where he will deliver several lectures at the University of Chicago.

Baseball was not included in the sports regime which Dr. Becker prescribed for the graduate and professional university students of Prussia. A week-end stay in St. Louis has failed to make him a fan, and he had plans for this afternoon which did not include the world's series game. But he and his son, Walter Becker, last year a student at Chicago University, spoke with interest of football practice at the University of California, which they saw a few days ago.

"The sports which we have introduced in German university curriculum are what we call light athletics, and what you would call track work," he said. "There was much controversy with the advocates of turnen, the turner training familiar in this country. We adopted some features of turnen, and other new exercises."

"We made it a requirement for teachers in higher schools," Dr. Becker said, "that they should put in at least two terms of athletics. The same requirement is made of medical and technology students, but not thus far of the law students. We have made limited use of football, what you would call soccer, but we have no big games and no big-money crowds, like those of the university games in this country. I do not think those will develop soon. Our university students, it is to be remembered, are graduate students, our high schools giving about the equivalent of a college course."

"Music was formerly, like physical development, a matter for private instruction. We have made it part of the regular school work, not only vocal and instrumental music, but theory."

"The Department of Education, under the German constitutional system, controls the publicly owned opera houses and theaters, not the private places of amusement. It also handles the relations between the state and the church, and a very important part of the readjustment was the establishing of new relations with both the former state church, which is Protestant, and with the Catholic Church."

"In the case of the Catholic Church, we had the Papacy to deal with. The republic, by its Constitution, seemed to renounce any right to dictate to the church; nevertheless, it was of great importance to have the right kind of bishops in some dioceses, especially those of the frontier. We had to get back by negotiation some of the things that our Constitution had renounced. It was a complicated matter, but the state now has a certain recognized influence in selection of bishops."

In his official position, Dr. Becker supervised the changes made in German school textbooks after the war, eliminating the selections which taught support of the monarchy, and substituting loyalty to the Reich and its Republican government.

Dr. Becker left his state position for political reasons, he said. His comment on recent events in Germany was that the Hitler demonstration, and the growing strength of radical elements, both Fascist and Communist, had shown the world the difficulties in which the German Government is placed by the Treaty of Versailles, both as to reparations and the national boundaries. "The responsible Government of Germany will try loyally to fulfill its treaty," he said, "but the world is coming to see that the German Government may need help, if it is not to be broken down by the attacks from two sides."

Some of Dr. Becker's addresses in this country are on his educational specialty: Oriental history, and on the present status of the Mohammedan world. His view is that Mohammedanism, like Christianity, is passing through a critical period of modernization, but he thinks that it, as well as Christianity, will survive.

BODY OF SLAIN MAN FOUND IN RAVINE NEAR CHESTER, ILL.

Special to the Post-Dispatch, CHESTER, Ill., Oct. 6.—The decomposed body of a man, thought to be St. Louisian because of a street car commuter's ticket in his pocket, was discovered yesterday in a ravine one mile east of Wells, near here. A watch and $13 in money also were found in the pockets. There are no identifying marks on the clothing.

The crushed skull, a hole and powder burns in the cap and the position of the body in the ravine just off the highway, cause the sheriff to think the murdered man was a victim of gangsters. The condition of the body indicates, according to the coroner, that the man has been dead about six weeks.

FAVORS ABOLITION OF HOUSE OF LORDS

Woman in Chair at British Labor Party Meeting Reviews Old Issue.

By the Associated Press. LLANDUDNO, Wales, Oct. 6.—For the first time in the history of the British Labor party a woman presided over its annual conference, which opened here today.

Miss Susan Lawrence, parliamentary secretary in the Ministry of Health, was on the platform, charged with keeping 700 delegates with widely divergent views in order and with steering discussions into channels safe for the MacDonald Government.

One of the political keynotes was sounded early when Miss Lawrence asserted with regard to the proposed abolition of the House of Lords: "Sooner or later the Labor party will have to take up that great constitutional question again."

She charged the Lords with obstructing the Labor Government and renewed the demand that the Labor party should do away with them as a parliamentary unit.

On its international record alone, Miss Lawrence declared, this Labor Government would live in history. She made a point of the London naval treaty which she said had stopped competitive building by the United States, England and Japan.

the hike that Harry missed
...and the Cause thereof

His troop...and he not there!

HARRY stopped raking to stare, as down the dusty street, before the house, swung a marching troop of scouts—his troop—off on a hike! He couldn't believe his eyes! His troop. And he not there.

Harry dropped the rake, took the porch steps three at a time. They couldn't—oh, they couldn't go without him!

"Why, I don't know, child," Mrs. Adams exclaimed, looking up blankly from her sewing. "Mr. Brenner, the scoutmaster, surely must have called you."

Harry from the yard, and Mrs. Adams from the porch, gazed sorrowfully after the khaki-clad marchers.

"So that was who telephoned this morning when I didn't get upstairs to the 'phone in time!' thought Mrs. Adams to herself, regretfully. "What we need, I guess, is an 'extension' telephone downstairs."

Telephones where you need them save time, steps—even play a part in preventing youthful heartaches.

An "extension" telephone downstairs might have made it easy for Mrs. Adams to reach the telephone in time. Few know that the extra cost of one or two "extensions" is between two and three cents a day. By a wisely-placed "extension" or two, an expert telephone man can often double the convenience of the telephones in your home. Call the business office of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

STRIKER KILLED WHEN CROWD FIGHTS POLICE IN BILBAO, SPAIN

BILBAO, Spain, Oct. 6.—One striker was killed and two were seriously wounded in street fighting with police here last night.
Several other persons suffered minor injuries.

Virtual martial law was enforced in the city. The guards were doubted. In some working class suburbs the authorities compelled pedestrians to raise their hands when they ventured into the streets.

The shooting occurred after a series of minor clashes over a political meeting early in the day.
Police attempted to break up a gathering on the Calle San Francisco near Calle Don de Mayo.
Suddenly some one fired a shot, precipitating shooting on both sides.

MINER WITH SHOTGUN SLAIN IN SCUFFLE AT HINTON, MO.

By the Associated Press.
COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 6.—John McCall, 60 years old, a miner of Hinton, 10 miles north of Columbia, was shot and instantly killed yesterday by Herbert Jones, 20, who is held in jail pending an inquest.
McCall and Jones had been away in the youth's automobile and returned to McCall's home, where a dispute occurred. McCall, according to his wife, then went into his house and got a shotgun to drive Jones away. In the scuffle McCall was shot.

Jones told Prosecuting Attorney
Franklin E. Redgan that McCall had been taking his money from him, had knocked him down on several occasions and had kicked him in the face to get money.
Jones said both had been drinking.

GRAND JURY INQUIRY INTO ELECTRICAL GROUP

Judge Calhoun Calls for Investigation of Alleged Violation of Anti-Trust Laws.

In his instructions to the October grand jury, which was sworn in today, Circuit Judge Calhoun directed that a diligent inquiry be made into alleged violations of the State antitrust laws, opening the way for a grand jury investigation of activities of the Electrical Employers' Association and three affiliated organizations.

The four organizations, which have been cited in quo warranto proceedings now pending in the State Supreme Court, were not named in the instructions, but it was announced recently by Circuit Attorney Miller that they would be investigated. At the request of the Circuit Attorney, Gov. Caulfield last week directed Attorney-General Shartel to assign two assistants to aid in the investigation. John B.
Edwards and Richmond Coburn, who had served as special Assistant Attorneys-General in the preliminary hearing of the quo warranto proceedings last spring, were appointed as regular assistants on the Attorney-General's staff and will assist in bringing evidence of the alleged antitrust violations before the grand jury.

Judge Calhoun directed the attention of the grand jury to the State antitrust statutes and called for an inquiry "into pools, trusts and unlawful combinations in restraint of trade."

The organizations, in addition to the Electrical Employers' Association, to be investigated are: Electrical Listing Bureau, Electrical Approval Bureau and the Electrical Protective Association, the latter a union organization. The grand jury action was instituted because quo warranto proceedings deal only with corporations, while "individuals guilty of antitrust violations may be indicted by the grand jury."

Edward Mallinckrodt Jr., chairman of the board of the Mallinckrodt Chemical Co., 16 Westmoreland place, is foreman of the jury.
The other members are Charles E.

SECRETARY OF TAMMANY DIES
William J. Duffy Suffered Heart Attack at Convention.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—William J.
Duffy, secretary of Tammany Hall and lifelong friend of John F. Curry, Tammany's chief, died early yesterday in Knickerbocker Hospital. He had suffered a heart attack while attending the Democratic convention at Syracuse. At his bedside were his wife, Mrs.
Frances Welch Duffy; his son, William Jr., Curry and other relatives and friends.

Mr. Duffy was the son of the late Terrence Duffy, for many years active in Democratic politics here and long a clerk in City Court.
He was born 50 years ago on the lower West Side, with which he remained identified throughout his political career.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD IN CANAL
Her Common Law Husband Held at La Salle, Ill.

By the Associated Press.
LA SALLE, Ill., Oct. 6.—Missing since early in September, Maggie Wasso, 48 years old, was found dead yesterday in the Illinois and Michigan Canal at Utica, and her common law husband, William Bender, 50, is held in La Salle County jail for questioning. Examination disclosed her skull had been fractured.

When the woman disappeared from Utica, where she lived with Bender, the latter explained she had gone to Wisconsin. In the shack where the pair lived, police found a cleaver bearing stains they thought to be blood. An inquest was begun and adjourned to Wednesday.

CHICAGO JAIL BREAK PLOT FRUSTRATED BY CONFESSION

Prisoner, Who Furnished New Crew in Lingle Killing, Guarded in Fear for His Life.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Frank H.
Bell, ex-convict, whose confession
last week gave police new information concerning the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, is held in the county jail under special guard today, in fear for his life.

Following his confession, which involved another prisoner, Richard Sullivan, Bell told authorities of a jail break plot. This, following the confession in the Lingle case, aroused the animosity of other prisoners, and Bell asked that he be kept in a cell by himself, fearing violence from his jail mates.

William Lenhardt, under sentence of death, was the prisoner who plotted escape, Bell said. A searched of Lenhardt's cell disclosed a pistol, and Hackshaw. A taxicab with a confederate was waiting outside to aid Lenhardt's escape even as Bell told his story.

In addition to being placed under special guard for his own protection, Bell will be given food cooked especially for him. This is to guard against any possibility of poisoning.

DISSOLVES JOHN L. LEWIS' SUIT ON USE OF MINE UNION NAME

JOLIET, Ill., Oct. 6.—The temporary injunction restraining the followers of Harry Fishwick from using the name "United Mine Workers of America" was dissolved today by Circuit Judge Frederick A. Hill.

In a decision mailed to the interested parties and their attorneys, Judge Hill dismissed the suit brought by supporters of John L.
Lewis, president of the International Union, "leaving the complainants to settle the entire controversy in the Sangamon County Circuit Court."

Judge Hill explained in his decision that he was making no ruling on the merits of the original issue, but that he was attempting to eliminate the confusion and conflict of jurisdiction.

VERDICT OF ACCIDENT IN EXPLOSION FATALITY

City Engineer Unable to Explain Why Part of Dynamite Failed to Explode.

An inquest verdict of accident was returned today in the death of Robert Lee Harmon, city photographer, who was killed Friday when city engineers attempted to dynamite an abandoned 135-foot chimney at the old Bissel's Point waterworks, near the foot of East Grand avenue.

Elton E. Easterday, city engineer in charge of the work; Charles H. Holman, city engineer, who placed the charge, and Elmer Peters, city electrician, who set off the blast, were the only witnesses. They had been under bond since the accident when Harmon was killed and 13 spectators injured.

Holman, who said he had 20 years' experience with explosives, testified he placed $1 charges of dynamite in apertures near the base of the chimney in a manner intended to cause the chimney to topple over toward the river.

Only 15 of the charges exploded, Holman said, throwing bricks, stone and other debris into the crowd of several hundred spectators. The remaining charges were set off at noon yesterday, with the result that the chimney fell as planned, he related.

Holman said the accident was caused by the failure of part of the dynamite to explode but was unable to assign a reason for the failure. He said he examined the wiring of the charges after the accident and was unable to find any faulty equipment.

Easterday corroborated Holman's testimony and added that Harmon had been warned he was too close to the chimney. Peters' only testimony was that he pressed the lever of a switch wired to the charges. When the chimney was razed yesterday, Capt. Elias Hoagland of North Market Street Station and eight patrolmen were present to keep spectators at a safe distance. When the first attempt was made, the engineers depended on a watchman to keep the crowd back, Capt. Hoagland reporting that no police detail had been requested and that he was unaware of the plan to dynamite the chimney.

TELLS A. F. L. LEADERS TO URGE 5-DAY WEEK

President Green Says Industry Should Be Informed of Demand.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Oct. 6.—The American Federation of Labor opened its convention today. P. Harry Jennings, chairman of the Boston Central Labor Union, was the opening speaker, following William Cardinal O'Connell, who delivered the invocation.

President William R. Green of the federation, addressing the delegates, said:

"The institution of the five-day week should be immediately inaugurated throughout industry. I wish that beginning now it might be the purpose of the officers of the federation to press upon industry our uncompromising demand that the five-day week be immediately established."

He made references to the convention held here in 1889, contrasting the problem that confronted the federation then and now.

The delegates today had before them the annual report of President Green and the executive council, outlining the accomplishments of labor during the year and a program for the future.

This report dealt with the unemployment situation and business conditions. It said that despite conditions during the last war, investigation indicated that experience in 1921 and 1924 were worse for labor.

The council found that "under our present business economy there have been frequent breakdowns due to failure to adjust production to markets and the inability of our credit system to meet such emergency."

Upon business management it placed the responsibility for such breakdowns. The field of distribution was declared to be unorganized, with only the preliminary moves made to obtain information that would develop better management.

The council, which comprises 11 of the leading officers of the Federation, held that "society has a definite responsibility for providing service for those who need employment." It suggested as possible remedies for the situation: Shortening of hours and work week lengths; encouragement of vacations; old age pensions; control of the tendencies of machines to displace workers, and better understanding and more economic information.

President Hoover's opposition during the past year to reductions in wages was praised by the council.

The establishment of headquarters and the co-operation of organized trades were suggested as essential to the continuation of the gains made in the campaign for unionization of the South.

Other matters dealt with by the report included the political objectives of unions; Immigration, judicial action in industrial disputes, and the organization of other countries.

The Council reiterated its stand of previous years on "the failure of the Volstead act to promote temperance." It favored modification of the act so as to provide for the manufacture of beer of 2.75 per cent alcoholic content by weight. It was made clear by the report that repeal of the eighteenth amendment was not demanded by the modification suggestion.

"We are of the firm opinion," the report said, "that the Volstead act could be amended without violating the provisions of the eighteenth amendment."

Membership of the Federation was reported as being 2,950,000 for 1929, a gain of 50,000 over 1928.

BILL ROBINSON, TAP DANCER, SHOT WHILE CHASING THIEF

Policeman Fired by Mistake But Is Praised by Negro Comedian for His Alertness.

By the Associated Press. PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 6.—Bill Robinson, Negro tap dancer, went to New York today, nursing a bullet wound in the left arm, inflicted by a policeman while both were chasing a thief.

Robinson, star of a musical show, "Brown Buddies," which ended its tryouts here and is due to open in New York tonight, was leaving his hotel for the railway station yesterday when he heard a woman scream and point to a youth fleeing with her purse. The actor dropped his bags and started in pursuit. As he ran he drew a pistol from his pocket and fired in the air.

Policeman Michael Horan, hearing the shots, joined the chase and seeing Robinson running ahead of him fired. The actor dropped. The thief escaped.

Robinson later said he did not blame Horan and complimented him on his alertness. Robinson is 34 years old and is known as one of the best tap dancers in the country. He also is known for his pantomime singing and comedy sketches.

$28,000 Carload of Alcohol Seized.

By the Associated Press. BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 6.—A carload of grain alcohol, valued at $28,000, the fourth large shipment of contraband seized here in six weeks, was in the hands of prohibition officials today, who attempted to trace its origin. The names of both consignor and consignee were found to be fictitious when the shipment, billed as wrapping paper, was seized on a railroad siding.

DOCTOR VANISHES FROM SHIP Lacking Funds to Return to U. S. He Had Signed as Officer.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Dr. J. R. Campbell, 37 years old, Lansing, Mich., physician, vanished from the liner George Washington on Sept. 25, the day it sailed from Cherbourg, Capt. A. B. Randall reported on the vessel's arrival here. Dr. Campbell had been ship surgeon and later had practiced in Europe. The day the liner was to leave Cherbourg, Capt. Randall said, Dr. Campbell came to him and said he lacked funds, but wanted to return to the United States. He was signed on as an officer and was seen on deck a few minutes after the ship sailed, then was missed.

ATHLETIC Another THREAT OF RAIN MAKES FANS SLOW TO FILL STANDS

For the third game of the Cardinals' thrilling home-town appearance against the Philadelphia Athletics and the fifth game of the World Series, there were barely 600 fans in the bleachers and pavilion lines when the gates at Sportsman's Park were opened at 9 o'clock this morning.

Fewer than 100 kept the all-night watch in front of the gates for preferred seats and they were probably gloomier than the lowering weather when they finally got their places because excellent bleachers seats were still available at 9 o'clock when the stand which held seats was about half full.

At the same time there were fewer than 200 in the pavilion, which has a capacity of 2500.

With the Cardinals' inspiring victories of Saturday and yesterday encourage an early and enthusiastic crowd, the small number was explained by ball park employees probably due to the fact that any one who has a job is required to be in the shop or office on Monday morning.

Momentary Bit of Sunshine. Shortly before 10 o'clock the sun momentarily broke through the clouds which had hung over the city during the early morning.

Fans were hopeful that the Government forecaster was correct in predicting showers tonight and tomorrow, rather than for the afternoon.

The early bleacher crowd lacked the spontaneity of the fans who waited by hundreds through Saturday night to get into the park for yesterday's game. For the most part they sat in silence, cheering only half-heartedly when the first members of the band came on the field at 9:30.

Things brightened up considerably, however, when the band straggled out into center field, as its chairs down on the grass, and at 10:20 swung into the National March, "Anchors Aweigh." The crowd in the bleachers burst into a cheer.

After a slow start the bleachers began to fill rapidly beginning about 9:30 and every seat was taken before 11 o'clock.

Noisiest Crowd of the Series. As the weather improved during the later morning hours at the rain seemed less imminent the crowd became the noisiest St. Louis bleacher gathering of the series.

When the band played "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," one of the standbys of the good old days, the barroom quartet, the crowd joined in with a will, singing lustily the old familiar chorus.

A white-haired trombone player arose from his place on the field and with his slip-horn in his arm waltzed on the grass while the crowd roared its approval.

Trumpeter, not to be outdone, after a toy balloon that had escaped from the stands and dived on it grotesquely as it hit the ground.

The Cardinals came on the field at 11:45 and Coach Barry was pitched for batting practice. Manager Gabby Street, as usual, to his place between second and third base, and dealt out practice balls.

The Athletics came out of the dugout 15 minutes after the Cardinals and the St. Louis team began batting practice.

The crowd cheered as they came in sight but the cheer was for the terrific smash by Chick Hafey, Cincinnati left fielder, which landed an upper row of the bleachers.

A capacity crowd was assembled when the last man in the park was taken at 12:45 and every reserved seat in the park was filled. Holders of reserved seats began taking their places rapidly at noon time and the grandstand boxes were more than three-quarters occupied at 1 o'clock.

Another Capacity Crowd, Noisiest of Series

THREAT OF RAIN MAKES FANS SLOW TO FILL STANDS

Fewer than 100 kept the all-night watch in front of the gates for preferred seats and they were probably gloomier than the lowering weather when they finally got their places because excellent bleacher seats were still available at 8 o'clock when the stand which holds 4000 was about half full.

At the same time there were fewer than 200 in the pavilion, which has a capacity of 3500.

The Cardinals came on the field at 11:15 and Coach Buzz Wares pitched for batting practice. Manager Gabby Street, as usual, took his place between second and first base, and dealt out practice balls to Wares from a leather bag.

The Athletics came out of the Cardinal discount 15 minutes after the St. Louis team began batting practice.

The crowd cheered as they came to sight but the cheer was for a terrific smash by Chick Hafey. Cardinal left fielder, which landed in an upper row of the bleachers.

Dykes Out, Gelbert to Bottomley, in First Inning of Today's Game

World Series Sidelights

By Herman Wecke.

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, Oct. 6.
When the Cardinals took the field for their fielding practice the first real cheer of the day went up. The crowd was later in gathering than at any previous battle.

Souvenir hunters were out in force trying to get Charley Gelbert to autograph score cards. If Charley does anything wrong today, those same persons will want to have him shot.

After Grimes had pitched two wide ones to Bishop, Burleigh suddenly remembered something and called Jim Bottomley in for a conference. He then pitched a strike, then another wide one and before it was over Bishop was called out on strikes.

The loud rooster was again on hand. He implored Grimes "to put every Athletic batter in the wagon."

For the first time since the teams arrived at Sportsman's Park, Connie Mack was seen wearing a hat. He's an old man, and it was not the best weather imaginable.

Rooters were on hand with cowbells, horns and every other device for making plenty of noise.

Fans were still wending their way to their seats when the Cardinals came in for their first turn at bat.

It was 13 successive batting failures for Frisch when he popped to Bishop in the first.

Grimes not only is a master pitcher, but he keeps shifting his defense for the various batters.

Sparky Adams turned loose the first fielding feature in the fifth, when he took Haas' low hopper and from an unusual position tossed to Frisch to start a fast double play. Those Red Birds are certainly doing some wonderful fielding in this series.

With Earnshaw at bat in the sixth a fan yelled at him: "Bring Hooper, swing," and George did—three times, without doing any damage. By this time the loud-mouthed individual was getting pretty hoarse and it was doubtful if he could yell any more.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Cubs sent Sheriff Blake after his second straight Chicago city series victory today, hopeful of finishing the series. The Cubs needed only one more win over the White Sox to retain the title they won in 1928, the last time the affair was staged.

Doris Bush selected Pat Caraway, his young southpaw, to stop the Cubs. Blake won a decision over Caraway in the second game of the series, when the southpaw weakened late in the contest. Hartnett was the Cub catcher and Tate received for the Sox.

The attendance was 18,444, which was larger than Saturday's gathering but smaller than the turnout yesterday.

Grimes Starts With Strikeout.
Grimes started the game just as he did in Philadelphia. He was a little wild, and Bishop worked his string to three and two and then took the next one, which Umpire Moriarty called a strike. Bishop also was called out on strikes leading off in the opening contest of the series.

Jimmy Dykes connected solidly but unfortunately his hot grounder went straight to Gelbert, stuck in the shortstop's glove and Charles threw him out. The loss was a bit high, but Bottomley stretched and caught the ball without having to leave the bag.

Cochrane then shot a bouncer through the box and when Gelbert failed to reach it with his outstretched arm, the ball rolled into center field for a single.

Grimes was a bit wild pitching to Simmons, but with a call of three balls and one strike Simmons missed a wild swing at a high one outside and popped the next one to Gelbert for the third out. Douthitt, first up for the Cardinals, tried to beat out a bunt but it was not very well placed and Foxx picked it up and beat Taylor to the bag.

Adams Gets First Card Hit.
Sparky Adams drew a "cheer" from the stands when he lined a single to center and by this time Lefty Walberg was warming up in the bull pen. Frisch, however, popped to Bishop, and on a hit and run play Bottomley bounced to Foxx, who stepped on first to end the inning.

Remembering Foxx's long drive in practice the fans held their breath when he hit one to left to open the second frame but Hafey easily made the catch, 50 feet from the bleacher wall. It was an easy inning for Grimes, Miller and Haas sending simple flies to Douthitt.

Earnshaw also retired three in a

FOXX HITS HOME RUN AFTER GRIMES PASSES COCHRANE IN NINTH, FOR ONLY SCORES

By J. Roy Stockton.

Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, Oct. 6.—Jimmy Foxx, a bullet-headed young man from the eastern shore of Maryland, who gave up farming to hit baseballs to distant points for Connie Mack, crashed his bat against one of Burleigh Grimes' offerings in the ninth inning this afternoon and the wallop broke up a pitching duel between Grimes and the Philadelphia pitching staff and gave the American League champions a 2 to 0 victory and a one-game lead in the struggle for the World Championship.

Cochrane had walked to start the inning and he scored ahead of the young farmer from Sudlersville, Md.

Suddenly as the end came, Grimes must have had a premonition or what the ball players call a hunch, that something was about to happen. He had just made all manner of fun of Al Simmons, for his funny way of putting his clothing as we went to the plate and Burleigh had a laugh at Al's expense when the American League slugger popped weakly to Gelbert.

A Tremendous Wallop.

But as Burleigh prepared to pitch to Foxx, a message was relayed via Jimmy Wilson to the bench and before Burleigh threw a ball to the Maryland farmer, Jim Lindsay had off his sweater and was warming up in the bullpen. But Foxx broke up the game before Jim could be called to the rescue. His four-bagger landed high up in the bleacher seats, a tremendous wallop, good for four bases to any man's ball park.

It was the second defeat suffered by Grimes and the second time that the Athletics' ability to hit baseballs long distances caused the spit ball pitcher's downfall. And just as the first Philadelphia hit at Shibe Park proved fatal to Grimes, each accounting for or figuring in a run, so the one extra base wallop today gave the American League a victory.

The teams will depart this evening for Philadelphia where the struggle will be renewed at Shibe Park Wednesday afternoon.

Bill Halahan again will be Hornsby at the bridge for the Redbirds and Connie Mack probably will depend again on one of the members of his two-man pitching staff—Groves and Earnshaw.

Grimes pitched a masterful game, gamely working his way out of danger in the eighth inning when the Mackmen filled the bases on two infield hits and a pass with only one out, but his performance was overshadowed by the brilliance of the hurling of Earnshaw and Groves. The big right-hander worked seven innings, allowing only two hits, before retiring for a pinch hitter and Groves, hurling the eighth and ninth, was touched for only one safety, a single by Frisch but with two out in the eighth.

The attendance was 18,444, which was larger than Saturday's gathering but smaller than the turnout yesterday.

row in the second. Hafey sent a drive to Simmons and Watkins, trying a bit too hard it seemed, struck out. Wilson connected solidly, but Simmons moved toward center and hauled down Jimmy's line drive.

Bishop Fines Again.
Grimes was in great form in the third. He struck out Bishop, who swung violently at the third strike and Frisch moved to his left and threw out Earnshaw. Bishop tried to coax a base on balls and took a called third strike for his pains.

Walberg began to warm up again when Gelbert drew four straight balls to open the home half of the third. Grimes followed with a cleverly placed sacrifice bunt, a runner down the first base line. Earnshaw fielded the ball and threw to Foxx at first for the put out.

Dykes Again the "Goat."

DYKES AND FOXX RESPONSIBLE FOR GROVE'S DEFEAT, MACK ASSERTS

TEAM BELOW ITS USUAL STANDARD IN 4TH BATTLE, MANAGER SAYS

Dykes Has No Alibi For Play on Which Chick Hefey Scored

"I CAN'T alibi on that one and I won't try. I saw Hefey coming toward third when that fast grounder was hit at me. I thought maybe I was too far up to get back in time to tag him. I thought the moment I grabbed the ball that I would go back and touch him, but I changed my mind as there were two out. So I threw to first. It was a rotten throw and that's all there is to it. Nobody but myself is to blame. Boley had no chance to call the play for me," said Jimmy Dykes.

John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, was asked what he thought of the play and he replied: "Dykes should have come back and touched Hefey. Never take the long way when the short way is the better way."

Other baseball managers pointed out that most ball players, confronted with the same situation that was before Dykes, would have made the play at first for no other reason than show their confidence in their throwing arm. Failure to throw would be virtual admission, they asserted, that the third baseman was playing a "safe" game and was not sure of himself.

By Connie Mack.

Manager of the Athletics. Robert Moses Grove pitched better ball yesterday than he did when he beat Grimes on opening day and it was a shame that such matchless pitching had to be ruined by the delinquency of our players who erred in a crisis to give the Cardinals two unearned runs and victory.

This tragedy was set in the fourth inning. After Frisch and Bottomley were retired, Hefey came through with a two-base hit against the screen in right.

Blades hit a high bounding ball to Dykes which should have been an easy third out. Instead of turning and touching Hefey, who was within a few feet of him and could easily have been tagged at the time, Dykes made the mistake of throwing to first. He quickly realized it after the ball hit his hand for the throw was a bit wide and eluded Foxx, who batted it down in front of him.

Hefey kept on for the plate and Foxx had a good chance to retire him by making use of his usual swift throws to Cochrane but he did not put his power in the hands and moreover it was low and Cochrane had no chance to retire Hefey, who scored.

Two hits followed, one a scratch or Gelbert's that Grove broke down but couldn't field, and the second run scored. These two runs defeated Grove and put the Cardinals on even terms with us in the world series.

In the fifth inning the Cardinals scored their first run on Miller's inability to hold Gelbert's hit along the right field line to a two-base hit and Haines came along with a single that scored him after he had taken third.

So I don't consider any of the scoring done by the Cardinals to have been clean but nevertheless the runs came in and beat us fairly.

Haines pitched wonderful ball after the first inning but we must not overlook the catch that Blades made off Cochrane in the third inning as Simmons followed with a hit and considerable damage could have been done if Mickey's hit had gone safe.

The Athletics bats have been idle in the last two days and will not do much start working again and I'm hoping that this will take place in today's game.

Such a galaxy of hitters that we have in the Athletics lineup can't be kept down.

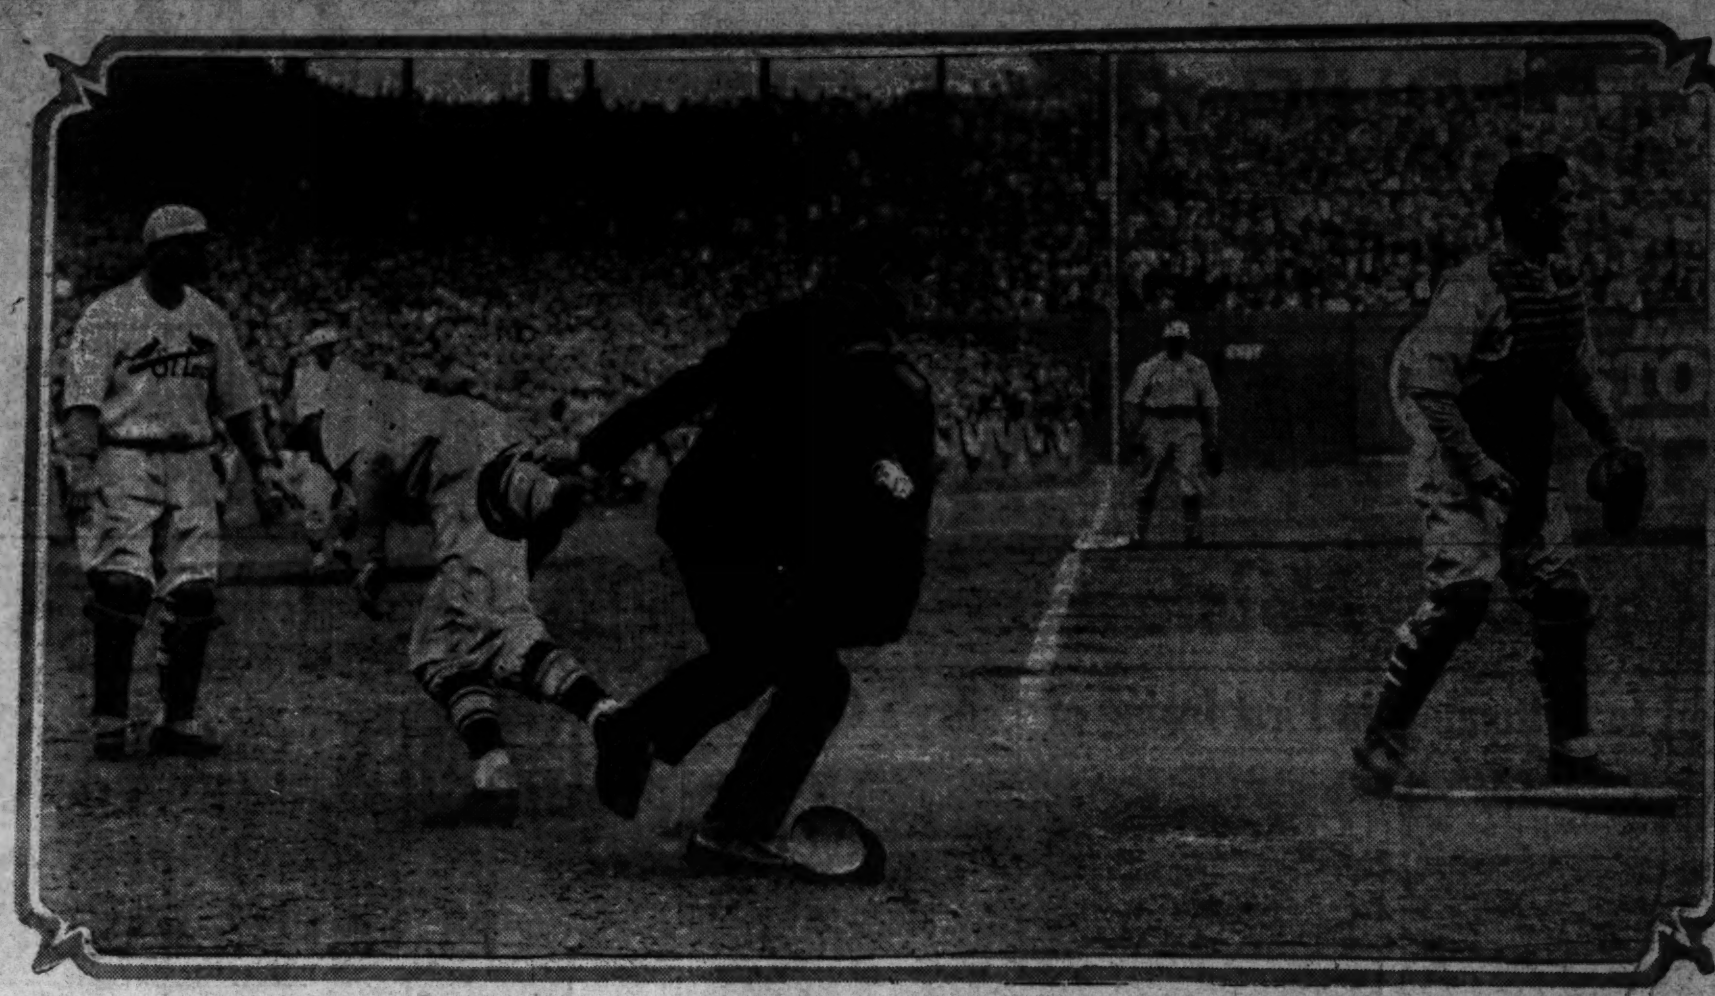

They are apt to cut loose any time.

We lost under heartrending circumstances yesterday, but we must not broken records and have lots of fight left. Haines pitched remarkable ball and deserves every credit while Charley Gelbert, who has played brilliantly all through the series, even a higher place yesterday, both with his timely hitting and sensational fielding.

Hefey Safe at the Plate in the Fourth Inning, Deciding Run in Fourth Game

In this inning Hefey doubled and Blades hit to Dykes who threw wide to first base, Hefey going all the way home, sliding across the plate. The picture shows Hefey just after rising from the ground. Both catcher Jimmy Wilson and Umpire Reardon are registering "safe" with their hands. Cochrane is scanning the play on the bases for a chance to pick Blades off base.

toward qualifying as the goat of the series on the next play. Doubt hit sharply to the third base man and Jimmy, remembering how he ignored a runner yesterday, decided to go after Gelbert, who was half way between second and third. Charley stopped and retreated slowly and finally regained second in safety by making a headlong slide. Dykes must have felt uncomfortable and probably remembered how Hefey Zimmerman once chased Eddie Collins from third base home in a world series game but fortunately for Jimmy the Mackmen got out of the inning without further trouble. Adams popped to Boley and Foxx went to the foul line for Frisch's hot grounder and beat Frankie to the bag.

Cochrane Fans in Fourth.

Grimes worked hard in the fourth inning, to turn back the dangerous batters, Dykes, Simmons and Cochrane. Dykes grounded to Gelbert of the rifle arm and Cochrane took a called third strike, one that was so good that Mickey didn't have to wait for the umpire's decision. Simmons had a lively time at the plate. Trying to duck one near his head, he got his bat in the way of the ball, and it was a foul strike. Burleigh then pitched two balls to make it three and one and Simmons, after fouling one off, was thrown out by Gelbert.

Wilson Bunts Side Out.

Hefey drew a pass after Bottomley fanned in the home fourth, but Haines was playing in right center and caught Hefey's drive without difficulty. With Hefey dashing for second, Wilson tried to surprise the infield with a bunt, but Earnshaw grabbed the ball and threw him out.

Foxx led off in the fifth with a single out of Gelbert's reach, but Jimmy was forced at second on Miller's grounder to Gelbert and Sparky Adams then grabbed Haines' grounder and flipped to Frisch, forcing Miller and Frankie's relay to Bottomley doubled Haines at first.

The Cardinals didn't get the ball out of the infield in their half of the fifth. Gelbert popped to Foxx. Grimes tapped to Earnshaw and Boley's throw from deep short retired Bottomley by a half step.

Gelbert Makes Fine Play.

Charley Gelbert drew a round of applause when he threw out Boley to start the sixth inning. Boley sent a hot grounder to Charley's left and he couldn't wait for a good bounce. He trapped the ball on short hop, a clever stop, and threw the runner out with yards to spare. Earnshaw then fanned and Frisch raced in to throw out Bishop on a slow roller.

Earnshaw appeared to improve as the game progressed and he was impressively fast in the sixth. He struck out Adams and when Frisch dragged a bunt toward first the pitcher raced over for a clean stop and tossed to Foxx for the putout. Bottomley then missed three swings for the third out.

Cochrane, Anger, Breaks Bat. Dykes drew the first pass off Grimes to open the seventh. Burleigh thought he had put over a third strike, but Umpire Moriarty called it second ball and Burleigh, after showing his anger at the decision, missed the plate with the next two. Cochrane shot a pop fly into the air and was so angry at himself that he broke his bat striking it on the ground. He might better have run to first base, for Wilson made the catch in fair territory. Watkins then ran almost to the foul line for Simmons' drive, and Grimes completed the job of nullifying that base on balls by striking out the hard swinging Foxx.

Wilson Hits Two-Runner.

Earnshaw slipped over called third strike on Hefey and Watkins fled to Simmons, but Wilson answered the pleading of the multitude by hitting safely to center field and when Haines was dilatory about throwing the ball in Wilson tore for second and beat Haines by a string of three and two, then tapped to Grove, who threw him out. And the fans began to move toward the exits. Gelbert was called out on strikes. And the Athletics once more had the upper hand on the series.

Crowd Gathers Slowly.

Despite the tightening up of the series by the two straight victories of the Cardinals, the crowd gathered slowly for the fifth game, the final one scheduled at Sportsman's Park. The bleachers, of course, filled early, and all of the seats there were taken long before noon. The pavilion, where unreserved seats are sold at 48 each, also were taken hours before game time, but it being a business day, the holders of the reserved seats waited till the last minute to leave their offices, and there was only a scattering of spectators in the upper and lower grandstands, and the boxes, at 12:40 o'clock.

Frisch Drops Wilson's Throw.

After Gelbert threw out Miller, first up in the eighth, Haines laid down a bunt toward third and beat Grimes' throw to first for the third hit off Grimes. With Boley at bat Haines tried to steal second. Wilson's throw had the runner, and Umpire Gelbert called him out, but apparently the ball slipped out of Frisch's grasp for the umpire reversed the decision and ruled Haines safe. Frisch threw the ball into the dirt in disgust but of course it did no good. Boley then hit sharply to Grimes. The ball caromed off Burleigh's glove. The pitcher recovered the ball and threw to Adams, but it was too late and Haines was safe and Boley was credited with a single.

Bob Grove hurried to the bull pen and began to warm up.

Jimmy Moore batted for Earnshaw. Grimes pitched two balls, a strike that Moore ignored, and then two more balls, and Moore walked, filling the bases.

Grimes Gets Out of Tough Spot.

There was a tough spot for Burleigh Grimes, the tough big bear of the mound, but he was equal to the occasion. Bishop grounded to Bottomley and Jim's throw to Wilson forced Haines at the plate and Jimmy Dykes then grounded to Gelbert, who took the ball on a pop fly to Bishop, and Adams on a grounder to Dykes.

Frisch was more fortunate and shot a hot single to center and the stands shrieked for Jim Bottomley to do something but he couldn't get out of his slump and struck out for the third straight time.

Foxx Hits Home Run.

Cochrane walked to start the ninth inning and when Simmons went to the bat after going through a lot of motions fixing his trousers and cap, Grimes, after pitching a strike, misplayed made fun of the Philadelphia slugger. Simmons popped weakly to Gelbert, but it soon was the Mack men's turn to make fun of Grimes for Jimmy Foxx picked on the first pitch and hit a tremendous home run, far into the bleachers in left-center, scoring behind Cochrane.

Miller took a called third strike and Haines bounced to Gelbert, but the stands didn't get any comfort out of that as the Redbirds ran in for their final turn at bat.

Hefey, first up, popped to Cochrane in front of the plate. And then Blades batted for Watkins and there was a cheer of hope as Ray drew a pass. Wilson, after a string of three and two, then tapped to Grove, who threw him out. And the fans began to move toward the exits. Gelbert was called out on strikes. And the Athletics once more had the upper hand on the series.

Despite the tightening up of the series by the two straight victories of the Cardinals, the crowd gathered slowly for the fifth game, the final one scheduled at Sportsman's Park. The bleachers, of course, filled early, and all of the seats there were taken long before noon. The pavilion, where unreserved seats are sold at 48 each, also were taken hours before game time, but it being a business day, the holders of the reserved seats waited till the last minute to leave their offices, and there was only a scattering of spectators in the upper and lower grandstands, and the boxes, at 12:40 o'clock.

The Cardinals went through a spirited batting practice and Chick Hefey entertained by hitting several tremendous drives into the left field bleachers. Jim Bottomley was the first one out for the workout, eager to find his batting eye.

Haines' Autographs Cards.

Jess Haines was besieged by souvenir hunters when he appeared on the Cardinal bench, and with a big grin Jess signed hundreds of score cards, baseballs and autograph albums.

Jess smiled all over when congratulated on his victory, and happily agreed that it was quite a game.

Grimes' Father Sees Game.

Burleigh Grimes' father was among the spectators, having journeyed from Clear Lake, Wis., to see "his boy" pitch against the Athletics.

Connie Mack's sluggers gave an impressive demonstration of long-distance driving during their batting practice. Jimmy Foxx bombarded the fans in the left-field seats and one of his drives cleared the top wall of the bleachers in right center and landed on Sullivan avenue. Al Simmons also gave the bleacher patrons a dozen or more souvenirs.

The scene of the world series struggle was shifted to Philadelphia after today's game. The Redbirds will depart immediately after the contest on a special Pennsylvania train, arriving in the Eastern city about 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The Athletics will catch a later train, leaving here about 5 and arriving in their home city at 6 tomorrow evening.

The sixth game will be played at Shibe Park Wednesday, and if a seventh game is necessary, it will be played Thursday.

CARDS ARE BEST FIGHTING TEAM, SAYS STREET

By Gabby Street.

Manager of the Cardinals. After the way we have come from behind to tie the Athletics in the 1930 world series, I don't think anyone will ever again doubt the gameness of my club. I have always contended that it was the greatest fighting team in baseball—one able to overcome all sorts of obstacles and I think the players have shown themselves to be such in taking two straight from the American League champions and evening up the series at two games each.

I admit some of my boys did not feel any the less after taking two on the chin in Philadelphia. But that's all changed now. We have come from behind and shown the Athletics that we can play winning baseball. Not only that but we are going to do it some more. Even after two straight defeats, I say we were going back to Philadelphia and events have proved that I was a good prophet.

In giving us our second straight victory, Jess Haines pitched one of his greatest games of the season. He was wild, but it was because he was putting too much "stuff" on his pitches. Of course, I had a man warming up in the bull pen several times, but even in the early innings, when he was going at his worst I never had any idea of taking him out of the box. He became better as the game progressed and he showed that even a right hand pitcher can stop such sluggers as Simmons, Cochrane and Foxx. I knew that Haines could do it and he certainly proved it. He was one of the finest exhibitions I have seen in a long time.

Turning Point of Game.

The turning point of the game came in the fourth inning, when, with the score tied, I chased Hefey home when Dykes made a wild throw on Blades' grounder. Chick, of course, scored. That run put us ahead and we were never headed after that. That was what I was after, though. I think that play upset the Athletics considerably, as after that they did not look as dangerous as they did in the early innings.

While passing around bouquets for my players, don't overlook Charley Gelbert. He has done everything that could be expected of a player. There never were two better reserves than these he made against Miller in the first inning and Simmons in the seventh. Had he missed either one it would probably have caused Haines a lot of trouble. Not only did he shine on the defense, but also on the offense, inasmuch as he scored the tying run for us and then drove in the tally that put us two to the good. This young man is certainly a great player, and a money player to boot.

Everybody asks me why Jim Bottomley has not been hitting. That I cannot answer. But this much I can say: Jim has been hitting at KANSAS CITY, Oct. 6.—Two touchdowns and two points after touchdown gave Jim Bausch, Kansas full-back, high individual scoring honors in the Big Six after the first week-end games, but three others press him closely.

Bausch has 14 points. Richard Sims, Oklahoma sophomore halfback, has 13 on two touchdowns and an added point. Ernest Muesel, Oklahoma full-back, and Price Swartz, Kansas Aggie end, each have 12.

Fourteen players aided in scoring the 100 points Big Six teams tallied.

nothing but good balls and he has driven out some hard smashes, but they have not gone safe. But he has done all that could be expected in the field and he is hustling all the way. Just like my entire ball club.

Haines, Loved by His Mates, Is Surrounded by Players After Victory Over Grove

By J. Roy Stockton.

Jesse Joseph Haines pitched the Cardinals to their second straight victory over that American League slugger, the Athletics of Connie Mack, yesterday afternoon and nobody has ever looked the fact it was one of the most brilliant exhibitions of magnificent hurling in world series history.

But it's too bad that the baseball-minded public doesn't know Haines more intimately, so that it could enjoy to the full the triumph of one of the finest characters that has ever graced an athletic field.

Did you see the Cardinals rush out to greet Big Jess after Blades had gathered in Joe Boley's fly for the final out of the game? Did you see Gabby Street, with eyes moist from the excited joy of triumph, grab Jess' hand with his gleaming fist? And did you see Big Jess' face, the face of a happy warrior, a veteran of the wars, a 23-year-old pitcher who was still good enough to pitch a four-hit game against one of the hardest-hitting teams of the day?

Loved and Feared by Mates. You saw no hero with feet of clay when you saw Jess Haines. The baseball public blindly worships some thick-skulled yokels, who are best worshipped from afar, but you'll make no mistake if you let Johnnie and Willie and the children take Jess Haines as their athletic hero.

Cynicism creeps into the soul of a man when he follows a professional sport for 15 years, as this writer has done, but then along comes a Jess Haines and that is compensation for it all. And if professional baseball gives you the privilege of knowing a Jess Haines, it is worth while.

The Cardinals love Haines and they fear him. He loathes defeat. He loves to win. When he is pounded from the box, as best pitchers in the world occasionally are, his comrades give him a wide berth. For Haines goes into a rage against himself for failing. In his younger days he would wreck a clubhouse after being knocked out of the box. Lookers would be overturned, a window or two broken and one time, after a particularly heart-breaking defeat, the Cardinals found a drinking fountain upset when they returned to the dressing room.

Master of His Temper. And there on a bench, with elbows on his knees and head in his hands was Jess Haines, tears of anger and repentance streaming down his cheeks. And nobody spoke a word. They wanted to sympathize but they knew better.

"I'm going to master that temper of mine," Jess would confide to his mates the next day. "I go wild when I can't win and that don't do any good."

In his younger days Jess would show flashes of that terrible temper out there on the pitching hill. When an error gave the enemy an opening or when a batter hit a perfectly pitched ball, he would stalk back and forth, calling for the ball, eager to get his hands on it and fire it through the strike zone. You can't fool the batters that way. Haines found it out eventually and fought against his temper.

And as added years came, Jess put a curb on the flames of his anger and then the big right-hander became a great pitcher. But in curbing his temper and in going through campaign after campaign, big Jess never lost his love for victory and his tolerance of defeat.

Gabby Knew His Man. Gabby Street, that hard-boiled old sergeant, insists there is no sentiment in his soul when it comes to tackling an enemy or picking his pitchers, but many a grandstand manager thought that the leader of the Redbirds was swayed by his heart when he nominated Haines for duty against Bob Grove and the slugging Ath-

HAINES LIKES TO PITCH IN SERIES GAMES ON OCT. 8

Jesse Joseph Haines, the gift of Philadelphia, O., to the baseball world in general and the Cardinals in particular, has reason to like world series pitching assignments which come to him on Oct. 8.

Yesterday, Jesse Joseph pitched the Cardinals to a 2-1 victory over the Athletics in the count in the classic of the games apiece. In so doing, Jess allowed only four hits, only one after the first inning, and won his game easily. Moreover, Haines singled and scored Gelbert with the Cardinals' first run in the third.

Exactly four years ago yesterday, pitching at Sportsman's Park, Haines shut out the New York Yankees, who won the 1926 American League pennant, 4-0, allowing only five hits in Oct. 6, 1926. Haines hit a home run in the fourth inning, scoring Tommy Thayer ahead of him.

Jesse may be pardoned, therefore, if he feels that Oct. 8 is his lucky world series day.

Everything was at stake. Another defeat would have put the Cardinals down ready for the cap to grace Haines' head, and great games. He pitched knuckle balls against the Yankees in 1926, until he wore the flesh off his knuckles.

Jess had the honor of pitching the game that clinched the pennant for the Redbirds, but that was against the Pirates and even though joy-riding Ducessers had punched Jess for five runs.

No, there was no unanimity of confidence in Jess Haines when he went to the slab to face Bob Grove and the Athletics before a capacity crowd of 40,000 persons.

But Gabby Street knew his man. And that was the game for which Haines had been pitched. Misfortune best him in the first inning and the faint-hearted thought that Jess would soon be out of the picture. But Bishop opened the game with a smash that squirted out of the slugging Bottomley's hands for a scratch and Jimmy Dykes worked and after Cochrane fouled to Adams, Al Simmons hit a real single to right, to send Bishop home with the first run of the game.

And mind you, with Bob Grove out there, the greatest pitcher in the American League, everybody knew that the Athletics would need many runs to have a margin of victory.

But that run was the last of the afternoon for the fast-tossing Athletics, which Jess by Simmons was the only clean safety they manufactured off the knuckle balls, the curve, the fast balls and the half-speed deliveries of Jesse Joseph Haines.

Jimmy Foxx followed with a twisting grounder which Frisch fumbled and which was called a hit because it was so slow that there was doubt as to whether Frisch could have thrown out the batter if he had picked it up.

There were three hits in one inning.

COACH H. ARMSTRONG TO SHIFT TO CENTER; NEBRASKA AND AMES STRONG

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 6.—Members of the Big Six, in general, ran true to expectations Saturday in their season opening games against non-conference eleven.

Missouri and Iowa State furnishing the only performances which might be placed in the upset classification. This week, conference teams will take on their first major conference competition when Nebraska journeys to Norman to meet the Oklahoma Sooners.

Featuring the week-end's play was an unexpected display of strength from Iowa State, an assurance that Nebraska adds a powerful "bone-crusher" eleven and the revelation that Missouri U., as it played Saturday, has perhaps the weakest eleven since coach Gwynn Henry took up coaching duties at the Tiger institution.

Aggies Win.

A 14 to 9 Kansas Aggie victory of Washburn College, the Kansas 26 to 0 vanquishing of Creighton and Oklahoma's 48 to 0 romp at the expense of New Mexico easily fell within the category of the expected and shed little, if any, light on the comparative strength of Big Six eleven.

The showing of Coach H. Workman's Iowa State Cyclones against the University of Illinois in dropping the encounter by one in a one-touchdown game to a new note of doubt to the Big Six was this fall. The Ames eleven failed to win a game last year, although possessing 16 lettermen was not singled out as a championship contender this fall.

The fact that the Ames Zuppke's Illinois could do was a capitalization of a fumble on the Ames 24-yard line for a touchdown seems to place the Iowa boys near the forefront of the conference teams.

Missouri's showing, miserable though it was as a whole, was without some encouragement. Tiger coaches. Fumbles, disastrous passing from center and sign calling of the country high school variety constituted the chief tangles of the Tiger eleven.

Coach Gwynn Henry hopes to eliminate most of these faults before the Tigers take on their second opponent this season in meet St. Louis U. at St. Louis next Sunday. The fumbles and bad passing, the fact that the Ames Zuppke's Illinois could do was a capitalization of a fumble on the Ames 24-yard line for a touchdown seems to place the Iowa boys near the forefront of the conference teams.

Capt. Leonard McGill also was he used some at center, Hefey said. Finding a capable man to call signals may be more difficult with a variety of substitutes and entirely of inexperienced men, a might even force Henry to consider that duty to a line man.

The Missourians are fortunate that they have until Nov. 1 before opening their conference games. In the meantime, they will be out of their faults, meeting three non-conference eleven, St. Louis, New York U. and Drake on the next three week-ends.

HAINES SURROUNDED BY PLAYERS AFTER VICTORY OVER GROVE

ing, and a run already for the pitcher. But it meant only the Cardinals were more come from behind, the best trick in their 1930 bag.

Hitless After the Third. Haines was a master of make after that first inning. An error by Frisch and a base on balls to the Mackmen an opening in second, but Haines slammed the door. Then in the third Frisch, Simmons beat out a grounder to Gelbert in deep short and then did a little door slam, grabbing Foxx's grounder and piping to Frisch to start a double play, thus nullifying Simmons' safety, the fourth and final hit the day off Jess Haines.

Haines gave the fans a name thrills before the game was over. The spectators thought that Jess was wild. But wasn't. His control was perfect. There are some batters on whom that you can't afford to careless with. Haines told me that his comrades before the game "I'm not going to give Simmons anything good and I'm not going to give anything good when it is dangerous. If I walk somebody out, I'm not going to work. I'm just going to weaken. I'm just going to let them go."

Nothing Good to Hit. And the Athletics didn't get thing good to hit. Simmons was on four pitched balls in the box but Jess was putting them in the box. Simmons couldn't like it and the pass did no damage. Foxx and Miller were easy to pick right-handers. Haines, a serious left-handed slugger, will be remembered by the whenever they think of the world series, drew a pass to

EQUIPOISE MAY BREAK DOMINO'S ALL-TIME MONEY-WINNING RECORD

WHITNEY HORSE IS ENTERED IN 2 RACES WORTH ABOUT $95,000

By George Daley.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Equipoise, H. P. Whitney's good 3-year-old, is in line to climb over the immortal Domino as the biggest money-winning juvenile of all time. Fred Hopkins, his capable and youthful trainer, has set his eyes on two goals—the one to surpass Jamestown, the present leader, with $151,925, and then to go after the high mark of $170,890 set by Domino, which was unbeaten in nine starts, far back in 1893.

With Jamestown in retirement since his spectacular victory in the Futurity at Belmont Park, Equipoise, beaten a head for that king prize of $39,600, is carrying on. That short head, just eight or 10 inches, cost him a place in the golden circle, and a money-winning record of great magnitude. He still has a chance for the record. His defeat in the Junior Handicap Saturday came thrown out, as he conceded Twenty Grand 11 pounds.

This rugged son of Pennant-Swirling, which, like Gallant Fox, seems to thrive on racing, did climb to the silver circle by winning the Eastern Shore Handicap and $26,900 a few days ago over the Havre de Grace track in Maryland. This purse carried his total earnings to $102,475.

To Start in Jockey Club Stakes. Hopkins now is pointing him for the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes over one mile at Louisville on Oct. 16, with a gross value of $35,000, and for the Eclipse Stakes of $50,000 over one mile and a sixteenth in November.

These stakes will have a net value of around $25,000. When Desert Light won the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes last season his share of the spoils was $23,685, while Flying Heels carried off $55,810 by beating Spinach a head in the Pimlico Futurity of 1929. If per chance Equipoise goes along to win both the spoils, added to his present earnings, would carry him well over Jamestown and over Domino, too, to make him the biggest money winning 2-year-old in the history of the American turf and so far as known of the world with a total close to $190,000.

It looked for a time as if P. Whitney would carry out his policy of a year ago and retire Equipoise, after the Futurity, to the end that he might be the better for the classic 3-year-old stakes of 1931 and particularly the Belmont Stakes, which he has not won since John scored in 1915. He finally decided, however, to let his good colt go along to fill his various engagements.

1929 Whitney Juveniles Failed. Mr. Whitney may have been moved to this decision by the failure of Whicome and Boojum to profit by their early retirement. In 1929 just after they ran first and fourth respectively in the Futurity, Boojum never got to the races this season while Whicome suffered from ailments which hampered him in his most important races. He did win the Withers, Saratoga, Miller and Whitney Memorial for a total of $57,370 but was beaten twice by Gallant Fox.

Only 10 in $100,000 Class. In the 75 years which make up the history of racing in this country only 10 2-year-olds have won $100,000 or over and two of these—Jamestown and Equipoise—have gone over the top this season. Here are the mighty 10 in the order of the years in which they raced:

Year	Horse	Sts.	1st	2d	3d	Amount
1891	His Highness	12	9	1	0	$108,000
1893	Domino	9	8	0	0	170,890
1907	Colin	9	6	0	0	131,907
1921	Mervish	11	11	0	0	115,234
1923	Pomery	10	6	3	0	151,626
1927	Antia Peabody	7	6	0	1	111,905
1928	High Street	7	6	1	0	103,500
1929	Whicome	7	4	1	0	125,455
1930	Jamestown	12	7	3	1	151,925
1930	Equipoise	12	7	3	1	102,475

Domino, Mervish and Colin were unbeaten as two-year-olds. Jamestown missed that distinction when he overcame half a length in the Hopeful Stakes by Epitheat, to which he was conceding 13 pounds and after a long delay at the post with 120 pounds up and a bitter head and head battle with Novellist all the way, which of necessity took much out of him. Incidentally, that half a length cost him the golden circle and a place over Domino. He in turn robbed Equipoise of unusual turf prominence in the Futurity. By such narrow margins are records set or lost.

Failed in Futurity Test. Mervish and Equipoise are the only two of the 10 which climbed to the silver circle as juveniles without winning the Futurity. That rich prize has been the stepping stone for the others to money heights and will continue to be. Seven of the 10 have earned distinction in the last nine years. Opportunities are greater in these days than in the olden times. Mervish was not eligible for the Futurity in 1921; and Equipoise was beaten a head but earned $30,000 for being second, which helped along.

Incidentally Equipoise would have had another boost of $28,650 except for that unfortunate disqualification after beating Vander Pool five or six lengths in the running of the Youthful Stakes at Jamaica last spring.

THIS WEEK'S GAMES FOR COUNTY ELEVEN

SATURDAY.

Oct. 11.—Normandy at Sparta, Ill.

*Non-league games.

The County League schedule this week calls for one of the most important games of the season, with Kirkwood entertaining Maplewood on Saturday afternoon. Two other league games are scheduled Friday, Wellston going to Clayton and Ritenour visiting University City. The other county eleven will see action on Saturday in non-league games, Normandy journeying to Sparta to tackle the strong Sparta Township High, while St. Charles meets Princeton.

Interest centers on the result of the Kirkwood-Maplewood game, with the winner being favored for the county title. Kirkwood has played two games, as has Maplewood, winning one, the other resulting in a scoreless tie. Maplewood has won two games.

A great aid to the Kirkwood team will be the return of Bill Brink, veteran backfield man from last year. Brink's eligibility had to be re-evaluated by the State board and notice of his eligibility has just been received. Brink has been practicing regularly with the team and is in good shape for the coming game.

Brink's return will permit Coach Lyons to place Bill Harsh, 200-pounder, back into the line and strengthen it still more.

University City, another likely contender for the title, is to play Ritenour this week in a game which should be an easy victory for U. City. U. City played to a scoreless tie last week with the Missouri Military Academy, while Ritenour bowed to Normandy, 7-0. A close contest is expected between Wellston and Clayton. Normandy and St. Charles will have their hands full this week, with Normandy tackling the strong Sparta eleven and St. Charles Princeton.

Yesterdays game, like the one the day before, was devoid of any real excitement or any real breaks. Of course, I suppose a lot of folks will say that Jimmy Dykes' error that let in two runs and lost the game for Bob Grove was a break. But the way I see things up I don't think errors or base BABE RUTH.

Like the day before, I played against Jesse myself, you know, and I know from experience just how tough that knuckle ball and that slow stuff can be. I'll never forget the time Jesse shut us out in the 1928 series and I know just how Cochrane and Simmons and the rest of the gang felt when they'd swing from the heels at what looked like a perfect pitch, only to have a little pop fly go sailing into a waiting

My 50 Years in Baseball

Under Mack's Management, Athletics Win Second American League Pennant in 1905 With .621 Mark After Hard Fight.

By Connie Mack,
Manager World Champion Philadelphia Athletics.

AFTER their rather disappointing showing of the previous year, the Athletics came back in 1905 and won their second American League pennant.

The team that season was composed of Harry Davis, first base; Dan Murphy, second base; Monte Cross, shortstop; Lave Cross, third base; Jack Knight, utility infielder; Hartsel, Lord, Seybold, Hoffman and Barton, outfielders, although the last named could also catch. Schreck and Powers, catchers, and Plank, Bender, Waddell, Henley, Coakley and Dygert, pitchers.

The Athletics won the pennant with an average of .621. It was a close fight nearly all the way and victory was virtually gained in a series in Boston early in September, when the Athletics took three out of four games from the Red Sox.

It so happened that on the last day of this series the ball had rolled, according to the legend, from wearing straw hats. As the Athletics players were charged with enthusiasm over their triumphs in Boston, they decided to smash all straw hats when they assembled at the Back Bay station in Boston to take a night train for Philadelphia.

The players filed into the station in twos and threes, and as each group approached the straw hats were broken. The victims then would line up with the others and help smash the skimmers of the newcomers until there wasn't a straw lid left on the team.

Andy Coakley, who had pitched and won on the previous day, lived in Providence, R. I., and I granted him permission to spend the last day of the Boston series with his family with the understanding that he would board our train when it reached Providence, which is only a short run from Boston.

Coakley, of course, was not in on the smashing ritual at the Back Bay station and Rube Waddell, who had taken an active part in the lid wrecking ceremony appointed himself a committee of one to greet Coakley when the train stopped at Providence.

Coakley's Ruse.

When Waddell approached Andy at the Providence station, the pitcher seeing a lot of snickering ball players waiting

WADDELL IS HURT IN SCUFFLE OVER OLD STRAW "LID"

LITTLE things sometimes have a great effect on big sport events. Connie Mack relates how he had intended to pitch the great Rube Waddell in at least two games of the 1905 World Series and then was compelled to go into that classic without the Rube being able to work at all.

After the Athletics had won their pennant, they were traveling from Boston to Philadelphia. It was "Straw Hat Day" in September and Waddell and the Giants won the World Series.

In these days of the flying hit and fast. Because of world series with the Giants. Our information was to the effect that the Giants did not like southpaws and as we had the best of the species in Waddell, it knocked all of my pitching plans gally west.

I had figured on using the Rube twice or even three times against the New York club, because we could always rely on him to keep the Giants from ever beating him in any remaining games he pitched.

The loss of Waddell also put the Athletics players in despair and the morale of the team was measurably lowered.

Waddell's accident sent rumors flying thick and fast. Because of his well known eccentricities, some of the fans accused him of laying down. They declared that influence had been set to work to keep him out of the Athletic line-up during the games with the Giants.

The wildest sort of stories were put in circulation. On the other side, we were accused of exaggerating Waddell's condition for the sake of effect and that when the series opened, the Rube would walk to the rubber to pitch the first game.

"Mack is trying to put something over on McGraw," was the way one restless fan phrased it.

I sincerely believe that if Waddell had walked out to pitch the first game, half the spectators would have exclaimed: "I told you so!"

Unfortunately for us the accident was a solemn fact. The truth is that the Rube was not able to raise his arm.

Knowing the Rube as I do, I'm positive that he would have shed his life blood to be in the series and duel with Mathewson.

The Rube had his faults but he was never a coward and all the gold in Christendom could never buy him. These ungrounded and undesired rumors of scandal mongers were a rank injustice to the great left-hander.

Connie Is Accused of Bluffing When He Makes Announcement That Rube Was Definitely Out of the World Series.

The trainer worked on Rube's arm indefatigably and while he attempted to pitch a few times after the accident he found it impossible to do so.

A Stunning Blow. The accident was a stunning blow to me for I had counted on Waddell heavily in the flying hit and fast. Because of world series with the Giants.

Our information was to the effect that the Giants did not like southpaws and as we had the best of the species in Waddell, it knocked all of my pitching plans gally west.

National Tennis Stars Sweep All Titles on Coast

BERKELEY, Cal., Oct. 6.—National tennis stars made a clean sweep of senior Pacific Coast titles in the final matches of the tournament at Berkeley Tennis Club yesterday with Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and George Lott, Davis cup star from Chicago, taking the major honors.

Mrs. Moody disposed of Mrs. L. A. Harper, San Francisco, in the finals of the women's singles with the same ease with which she eliminated her other opponents, taking the match, 6-3, 6-1.

She paired with Lott, who won the singles title Saturday, to capture the mixed doubles crown. They downed Edith Cross of San Francisco and Wilmer Allison, Davis cup player, from Austin, Tex., 6-2, 7-5.

Allison and John Van Ryn, Orange, N. J., Davis cup doubles pair, added the Pacific Coast mixed doubles championship to the list of their titles by beating Cranston Holman and Gerald Stratford of San Francisco, 7-5, 6-3, 6-4.

Jay Cohn, Santa Monica, Cal., defeated Jack Lynch, 6-4, 10-8, to annex the junior singles title for boys under 15. Marian Hunt, San Francisco, defeated Alice Marble for the junior girls' singles honors, 7-9, 6-2, 6-3.

All the city high school football teams will see action this week, with three of the teams playing on Friday and two on Saturday. The games will be non-league contests. After having displayed scoring power in the game with Western Military Academy last week, Roosevelt will battle Principia College, Friday, at the Rough Riders' field. Fear was expressed by Coach Leo R. Carlson early in the season that Roosevelt would suffer greatly by the loss of five "all-star" players on last year's team, but any doubt as to the Rough Riders' scoring ability was dispelled by the 31-to-6 victory over the Western catalysts.

Central plays at Crystal City. Central held Principia to a scoreless tie, so that the result of Roosevelt's game will serve as a means of comparing the two schools. Central will be the guest of Crystal City, Saturday night. The Mid-cityans, with several veterans in the lineup, are considered as serious contenders for the public schools championship.

If the pressmen's showings furnished an accurate indication of a team's ability, Cleveland would be rated the lowest it has been in a number of years. In the two games played thus far, Cleveland

READY TO CONSIDER CONCRETE CHARGES

Foreman of Special Grand Jury That Attorney-General Has Not Bought Extended Powers.

Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—Gov. Roosevelt today declined a request of an extraordinary grand jury, which investigated charges of official misconduct against former Magistrate Ewald, that the attorney-general be extended his powers to inquire into any matters relating to office conduct and corruption in office on part of public officials in New County.

The Governor said in his letter, addressed to Richard L. Morris, foreman of the special grand jury, that the attorney-general himself made no request for extension of his powers nor had he sent the executive one single scrap of evidence or even an official communication concerning such charges.

The Governor said he had no power to extend the right to force in local communities under the charges presented were official and unless further the authorities had failed to act. Such is the law," he continued.

The Governor to direct a local investigation unrestricted in scope and the continued repetition of the press of general vague rumors affecting the integrity of the same Court bench.

REFUSES WIDER
EWALD INQUIRY

EADY TO CONSIDER
CONCRETE CHARGES

ells Foreman of Special Grand Jury That Attorney-General Has Not Sought Extended Powers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Gov. Roosevelt declined today a request of an extraordinary grand jury, which has investigated charges of official wrongdoing against former Magistrate George F. Ewald, that the attorney-general be permitted to inquire into any matters relating to official wrongdoing and corruption in office on the part of public officials in New York City.

The governor said in his letter, addressed to Richard L. Morris, foreman of the special grand jury, that the attorney-general himself had made no request for extension of his powers nor had he sent the chief executive one single scrap of evidence or even an official communication concerning such evidence.

This, the governor said, was in spite of the fact the attorney-general had, since the very beginning of the Ewald investigation, encouraged the continued repetition of the press of general vague rumors affecting the integrity of the supreme court bench.

The governor said he had neither the power nor the right to perform in local communities under the charges presented.

Specific and unless further the local authorities had failed to act, "Such is the law," he continued. "For the governor to direct a local investigation unrestricted in scope and universal in its application would be an absolute abuse of executive functions, and contrary to law. Without these two prerequisites I cannot lend the high office of governor to a general inquiry in the search of some kind of misconduct."

The governor wrote that if and when any other concrete charges were laid before him, he would take such action to have the charges fully investigated by the appropriate authority.

Mrs. Martin J. Healy, who had said she would go to jail rather than testify before the grand jury which indicted her husband, and three others in an investigation of official wrongdoing against Ewald, charged her mind today. She told supreme court justice McCook she would answer questions. It was learned she was ready to sign a waiver of immunity, which she refused to do when first taken before the grand jury. Her offer to testify followed a similar offer by seven Tammany chiefs whose "limited" waivers of immunity have been refused by Special Prosecutor Iram Todd.

Even while the governor's statement was being issued, another of the buying inquiry was started in Bronx County. Supreme Court Justice Cohen informed the October grand jury that it should investigate an anonymous letter which charged that judicial appointments in the Bronx were sought and paid for.

MISSOURI U. ESTABLISHES
7-YEAR MEDICAL COURSE

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 6.—Re-establishment at the University of Missouri of a seven-year medical curriculum by the Board of Curators with the addition of two years of advanced clinical study was announced here today by President Walter Williams. The change is effective immediately, President Williams said. The full six-year course was abandoned in June, 1929. The university officials and the Board of Curators had been memorialized by the Missouri Medical Association State officials and prominent physicians in St. Louis and Kansas City to make this change. The establishment of the two clinical years in medical study was also recommended in the report of Gov. Caulfield's State Survey Commission.

The Missouri U. School of Medicine previously had been unable to grant the degree of Doctor of Medicine, which will now be possible. The change had been held because of a lack of clinical facilities. President Williams said he had obtained permission for use of the clinical facilities of the Boone County Hospital here and in addition expects a larger appropriation from the next State Legislature for enlargement of the University Hospital. Missouri U. School of Medicine was founded in St. Louis but was subsequently moved to Columbia in 1872.

TEXT OF PRESIDENT HOOVER'S
ADDRESS TO CONVENTION OF FEDERATION OF LABOR

Employers and Workmen, He Asserts, Have Contributed to Taking Up Slack of Unemployment.

BOSTON, Oct. 6.—Following is the text of President Hoover's address today before the convention of the American Federation of Labor:

"Members of the American Federation of Labor: "In his invitation that I should address you on this occasion, President Green spoke in terms of high praise of the benefits to labor from the nation-wide co-operation initiated at the White House last November for mitigation of the effects of the present depression.

"At those White House conferences the leaders of business and industry undertook to do their utmost to maintain the rate of wages. They also undertook in case of shortened employment to distribute work as evenly as possible over their regular body of employees. The leaders of labor undertook to urge effort in production and to prevent conflict and dispute. The public officials and the managers of industry and utilities undertook to expand construction work to mitigate unemployment.

"We have now had nearly a year in which to observe the working of these arrangements. These, the first undertakings of this character in our history, have been carried out in astonishing degree. There are, of course, exceptions, but in the large sense our great manufacturing companies, the railways, utilities, and business houses have been able to maintain the established wages. Employers have spread their employment systematically. For the first time in more than a century of these recurring depressions, we have been practically free of bitter industrial conflict.

The fine co-operation in the providing organized emergency employment through Federal, State and municipal public works and utility construction has been an important contribution in taking up the slack of unemployment. The measure of success is easily demonstrated. The Department of Commerce reports that in the boom year of 1929 the number of men in industry and the construction work by the railways and utilities in the last eight months amount to about $4,000,000,000, as compared with about $4,000,000,000 in the same period of the boom year of 1929 or an increase of about $500,000,000. In all previous depressions these works decreased, so that the gain is more than even the apparent figure.

Nation-Wide Team Play. "We have thus had nation-wide co-operation and team play which has greatly ameliorated the hardship of this depression. These measures have served as a practical system of unemployment insurance. There are some unexpected by-products. Through distribution of employment, large numbers of workers have been saved from being forced into competition for new jobs; the sense of security that the job is theirs by part-time employment has contributed to relieve much of the fear, despondency and discouragement that come to men and women in search for new jobs in hard times.

"I would indeed be remiss if I did not express an appreciation, in which I know you share, to the thousands of men in leadership of business and labor who have served in bringing about these results. In the face of decreasing prices it has required great courage, resolution and devotion to the interest of their employees and the public on the part of our great manufacturers, our railways, utilities, business houses and public officials.

"The leaders of labor have likewise contributed their part. Our freedom from strike and lockout is well evidenced by the statement of the Department of Labor that in the last depression there were more than 2000 labor disputes, many of them of major character and accompanied by great public disorder, as compared with less than 300 disputes in this period, and these mostly of minor character. And the great body of labor itself deserves much praise, for never was its individual efficiency higher than today.

"The undertakings made at that time represent a growing sense of mutual responsibility and a willingness to bend private interests to the general good. "We still have a burden of unemployment. Although it is far less than one-half in proportion to our workers than in either England or Germany, no one can contemplate its effect in hardship and discouragement without new resolves to continued exertion and to further effort in solution of our greatest economic problem—stability in employment.

An American Base of Wage. "Our chairman has spoken of my interest in the development of an American basis of wage. But the directors of industry and your leaders have made great progress toward a new and common ground in economic conception, which, I am confident, has had a profound effect upon our economic progress during the last few years. That is the conception that industry must be constantly renovated by scientific research and invention; that labor welcomes these labor-saving devices; that labor gives its full and unrestricted effort to reduce costs by the use of these machines and methods; that the savings from these reduced costs shall be shared between labor, employer, and the consumer. It is a philosophy of mutual interest. It is a practice of co-operation for an advantage that is not only mutual but universal. Labor gains either through increase of wage or reduction of cost of living or shortened hours. Employers gain through enlarged consumption, and a wider spread distribution of their products, and more stable business. Consumers gain through lower cost of what they buy. Indeed, mass production must be accompanied by mass consumption through increased standards of living.

"A conception of this sort does not at once find universal application. We ought not to forget that it is something new in the world's economic life. And there are, of course, those who do not yet believe. It is as far apart as the two poles from the teachings of the economists of 100 years ago, who took it for granted that the well-being of the worker could be purchased only at the expense of the well-being of the employer or some third group in the community, and further that wages could never rise above subsistence, or the number of workers would so increase as to pull the weaker back into the cesspool of poverty.

POLISH ELECTION ON NOV. 16
PLEBISCITE ON PILSUDSKI

Premier to Put His Name at Head of Government Party Ticket.

By the Associated Press. WARSAW, Poland, Oct. 6.—Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, Premier of Poland, today decided to use the parliamentary election Nov. 16 as a plebiscite by which the country may pronounce itself for or against him. Polish electors vote on lists of candidates presented by political parties, which obtain seats in Parliament in relation to the number of votes cast on their lists. Pilsudski will put his name at the head of the Government party list, and thus those who vote for that party also will express their confidence in the Marshal.

WHY CHINESE BANDITS KILLED
TWO WOMAN MISSIONARIES

Outlaws Suspected They Had Been Betrayed by Intermediary in Ransom Negotiations.

By the Associated Press. FOOSHOW, China, Oct. 6.—A Kienning, Fukien, dispatch today indicated the bandits who were reported to have killed Miss Edith Nettleton and Miss Eleanor June Harrington, British missionaries, did so because the outlaws suspected they had been betrayed by an intermediary in the ransom negotiations.

The Kienning advices said a representative of the bandits arrived last spring, there were no opinions to be handed down today. There were, however, motions for admission to the bar, advancement of hearings on a number of cases and presentation of many petitions for reviews of lower court decisions.

NOVA SCOTIA SWEEP BY STORM

By the Associated Press. HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 6.—A northeast gale, accompanied by heavy rain, which swept Nova Scotia during the week-end, caused extensive damage to the apple crop, disrupted communication and wrought havoc among small craft. Growers estimated a loss of more than $100,000 as the result of thousands of barrels of ripe apples being torn from the trees in the Annapolis Valley.

In Halifax Harbor a barge laden with dynamite used in construction of a new pier, broke from its moorings and drifted among the craft moored at the breakwater of the Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Club. The barge was hoarded and towed to a place of safety after the detonators on board had been removed. Two yachts were torn from their moorings and dashed to pieces against the sea wall. Several steamers caught in the port delayed their sailings. Power and communication lines were put out of commission.

FIVE NEW U. S.
DISTRICT JUDGES
RECOMMENDED

Senior Circuit Jurists Also Favor Making 16 Temporary Posts Permanent, Hughes Announces.

SUPREME COURT
GOES INTO SESSION

Has Before It 350 Cases, Accumulated During Summer Recess—Orders to Be Announced Next Week.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The Supreme Court began a new term today with all members present and the old Senate chamber, in which it is still quartered pending construction of a new building, crowded.

As it disposed of all cases awaiting decision before adjournment last spring, there were no opinions to be handed down today. There were, however, motions for admission to the bar, advancement of hearings on a number of cases and presentation of many petitions for reviews of lower court decisions.

The members of the Court will devote the next two weeks to private conferences, in the course of which the 350 cases accumulated during the summer recess will be divided into two classes—those to be reviewed on their merits and those which must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

The court will meet again a week from today and announce a number of orders. Another week's adjournment will follow and then oral arguments will begin.

On the eve of convening, Chief Justice Hughes made public recommendations of the senior circuit judges that five new District Judges be appointed to help stem the mounting tide of criminal and civil cases with which the courts are finding it impossible to keep abreast.

District Court Lagging

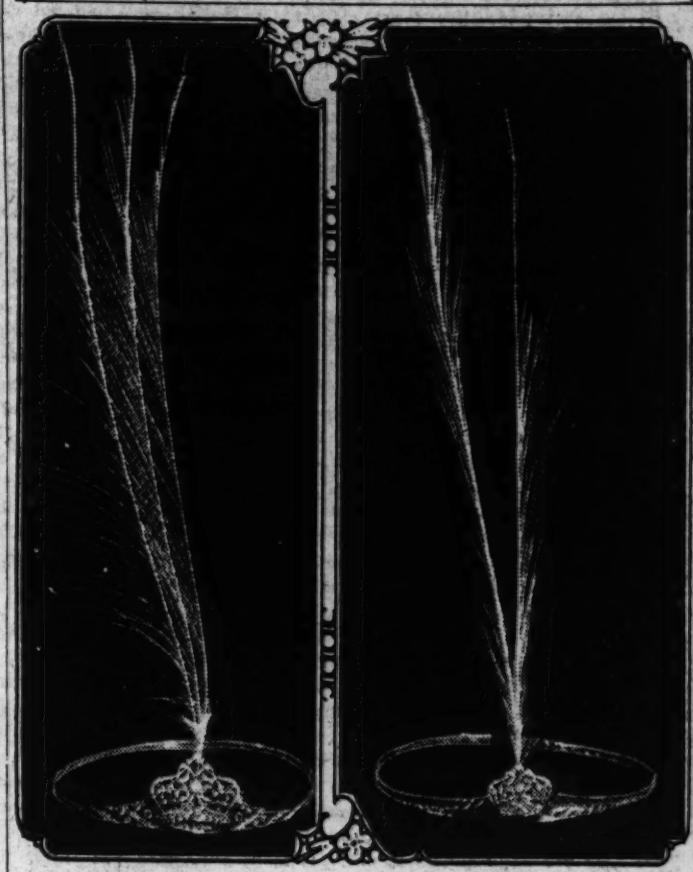

Besides the five new judges who would serve in Southern New York, Eastern New York, Northern Georgia, Eastern Michigan and West Virginia, the circuit judges recommended making permanent 16 temporary district judgeships and one circuit judgeship. Congress provided these in 1922 but limited them to the lifetime of the appointees.

Two are in Massachusetts, two in Southern New York, one each in Eastern New York, Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Michigan, Western Missouri, Southern New Jersey, Northern Texas, Northern Ohio, Eastern Missouri, Southern California, Arizona, Southern Iowa and Minnesota. The circuit judgeship in the district embracing California and adjacent Western States.

The courts, the judges reported, are disposing of more cases than ever before but the business is gaining on them. It is the District

COLORADO OIL SHALE SURVEY BY JUSTICE OFFICE

Assistant Attorney-General Investigates Situation in Absence of Specific Charges by Kelley.

DECISION ON ACTION
LIKELY THIS WEEK

Any Case That Appears Questionable Will Be Traced Through the Interior Department.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—An early official stand by the Department of Justice on general claims by Ralph S. Kelley that Interior Department officials have mishandled Colorado oil shale lands, appeared probable today, despite silence by Kelley concerning all details of his charges.

Assistant Attorney-General Seth W. Richardson, who is directing Federal investigation into the charges of the former Denver Land Office chief, has indicated some form of conclusion may be reached this week.

In the absence of specific charges, Richardson has been conducting a survey of all oil shale cases during recent years. He said he would trace through the Interior Department any case that appeared questionable.

Kelley chose a newspaper as the medium of making public his specific charges, declining an invitation from the Justice Department to lay his objections before it. The former Denver Land Office official submitted his resignation to Secretary Wilbur last Sunday, at the same time claiming the Interior Secretary had made concessions to oil applicants in the Colorado shale lands, and that oil interests were attempting to obtain lands illegally. Wilbur suspended Kelley and asked for an investigation.

Possibility of another inquiry into the charges has been made known by Senator Nye (Rep.), North Dakota, who is chairman of the Lands and Campaign Funds Committee of the Senate. He said he would shortly investigate senatorial campaign expenditures in Colorado, seeking possible contributions by these same oil companies. Nye conferred with Kelley last week, and afterward said he believed the latter was justified in the action he had taken.

A CHOWDER MAKES A ONE-DISH MEAL

This Dish Deserves a Prominent Place in Fall and Winter Menus.

There are many kinds of chow-ders, though to some people mention of the term brings up the picture of clam chowder only.

Even this picture will vary depending on the section they live in,
or perhaps the kind their ancestors were used to. For New Englanders have one definition of clam chowder and New Yorkers quite another. Corn chowder, parsnip chowder, that made from potatoes, from any kind of fish, from shrimp or clams—each of these is hearty, wholesome and delicious, and with a green salad makes a very satisfactory meal.

In the New York style chowder the clams are pretty well disguised under tomatoes and seasonings. In the New England dish, clams, milk, potatoes and salt pork are the main ingredients and the clam flavor predominates. Here are some recipes for several kinds of these nourishing fall soups, in quantities that will serve two to four people.

Clam Chowder.

One and a half dozen large clams will be needed. Have these opened, and be sure to save all the juice. Four one cup cold water over the clams, and then strain the water and juice together through a fine strainer. Cut the hard part of the clams into small bits, or chop them. Leave the soft parts whole and keep them separate.
Cut a slice of fat salt pork into small dice and fry in a soup kettle until beginning to brown. Add one medium sized onion, sliced and cook until yellow. Then add the strained clam juice, one cup diced potatoes and the chopped clams.
Cook slowly until the potatoes are tender, or for about 25 minutes.
Then add the soft part of the clams and reheat to the boiling point. Next add one and one-half cups milk and two tablespoons butter blended with two tablespoons flour. Season with one-half teaspoon salt, or more according to taste, and a little pepper. Serve very hot with hard crackers.

Chowder, New York Style.
Use one-half dozen large clams, pick over to remove any bits of shell, and cut off the hard part of the clams. Chop these and leave the soft part whole. Cut a slice of fat salt pork in dice and fry until beginning to brown, then add a large sliced onion, the clam juice,
one cup water, two cups tomatoes,
one cup diced potatoes, one-fourth cup diced celery, one-half teaspoon thyme, one teaspoon salt and a little pepper. Cover and cook for 25 minutes or until the vegetables are tender. Then add the soft part of the clams and cook three minutes longer. Thicken slightly with two tablespoons butter blended with two tablespoons flour. Serve very hot.

Fish Chowder.
The fillets of fish that may be bought all prepared and wrapped in parchment paper are convenient for this. One fillet weighing about half a pound will be needed.
Skin this and cut the fish in dice.
Cut a fat slice of salt pork into dice and fry in a saucepan until beginning to brown. Peel and slice three medium-sized potatoes and one large onion. Put a layer of fish in the kettle on top of the pork and sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Add a layer of onions and potatoes, then the rest of the fish and the rest of the potatoes. Add enough cold water to just cover.
Cover the pan and boil gently for 25 to 30 minutes, or until the potatoes are tender. Melt two tablespoons of flour, add two tablespoons butter and when blended stir in two cups milk. Stir until boiling, add to the chowder and season to taste with salt and pepper. Sprinkle a little minced parsley in the chowder and serve very hot with hard crackers.

Parsnip Chowder.

This is an old-fashioned dish that will be relished by those who like the flavor of parsnips. Scrape young parsnips and chop enough to make one cupful. Dice potatoes to make one cupful, slice two onions and cut a slice of fat salt pork into dice. Fry the pork, then add the onions and cook slowly for five minutes. Add the parsnips and potatoes, one teaspoon salt and a little pepper and one and one-half cups boiling water. Cover and cook slowly until the vegetables are soft —or for about 25 minutes. Then add one pint of milk, one-third cup rolled cracker crumbs and one or two tablespoons minced parsley.
Serve very hot.

About Pepper.
Black and white pepper both come from the same source. Black pepper is the entire dried immature berry of the pepper plant known as the "Piper nigrum" which grows in India, on the Malay peninsula and in Sumatra and Java.
The berries are dried until they are hard and brittle and are then ground. In making white pepper, the dark outer coatings of the pepper berry are removed and the berry then ground. White pepper is less pungent and more delicate in flavor than the black.

COLD ROAST LAMB
MAKES TASTY DISHES

Second-Day Main Dishes Easily Prepared From Leftover Baked Cuts.

On account of the extreme popularity of roast lamb this season, many housekeepers, on Monday morning, find the remains of a roast leg or shoulder of lamb in the refrigerator.

As a general thing, leftover baked lamb makes dainty and delicious second-day main dishes.
Housewives will find these three dishes have great appetite appeal.

Stagout of Lamb.
Cut the meat from the remains of a roast lamb. Put the bones in a sauce pan with a sliced onion, a small carrot, a teaspoon of salt and one quart of water. Cover and boil slowly for an hour.

Cut the meat in small even size pieces, sprinkle with flour, salt and pepper and brown in three tablespoons of melted fat.
Then add the strained lamb broth
that has been made from the bones,
one-half cup finely diced carrots,
one dozen tiny white onions, one tablespoon chopped parsley. Cover and cook slowly for 40 minutes.

Next add one cup of cooked peas and one-half cup sliced fresh or canned mushrooms. Thicken the gravy with two tablespoons flour mixed with a little cold water. If necessary, add a little kitchen bou-quet to give a good color.

Serve with boiled rice or noodles.

Tempting Lamb Dish.
Cut slices from a roast of lamb and on each slice lay a spoonful of stuffing, made with bread crumbs, beaten egg, butter, salt and pepper, sage and summer savory. Roll up slices and pin with little skewers or toothpicks. Put a little butter and water in the baking pan, place in it the rolled slices and bake in a hot oven about ten minutes, basting several times.

When done, thicken the gravy, pour it over the meat, garnish with parsley and serve on a hot platter.

Curried Lamb With Rice.
Cut lamb into pieces for serving.
Place meat in a large kettle, cover with boiling water, add one bay leaf, two small onions, sliced; six peppercorns, one teaspoon chopped parsley; cover and simmer until tender, about two hours. Remove the meat, strain stock into another pan and thicken it with four tablespoons flour combined with one-half teaspoon curry powder and water to make a paste. Cook the gravy until thickened, add salt and pepper to taste and serve the meat on a hot platter with a border of steamed rice. Garnish with parsley.

DIETARY REQUIREMENTS

Health of Individuals Depends Largely on Food.

The daily food supply of the average individual—child and adult alike—should include a plentiful supply of vegetables, if good health is to be maintained. And by a plentiful supply, is meant two vegetables each day besides potatoes, and generous servings of them.
One of these vegetables should be green, and it may be raw, and the other may be chosen from the list of root vegetables. The green ones, and those that may be eaten raw, include cabbage, kale, spin-ach, chard, asparagus, beet tops, turnip greens, endive, celery, broccoli green peas and beans, raw carrots, onions, lettuce romaine.

Stuffed Peppers.
The peppers for dinner that night may be stuffed with a mixture of boiled rice, shrimp and tomato. For four peppers allow one and one-half cups boiled rice, one cup fresh cooked or canned shrimp and one-half cup chopped tomato. Season with salt, pepper, one-fourth teaspoon curry powder and one-half teaspoon grated lemon rind. Stuff the peppers and bake in a covered pan for 40 to 50 minutes or until tender.

Prune Nog.

One and one-eighth cups of water, one and one-half cups of evaporated milk, three cups of the juice of fresh stewed or canned prunes. Combine the milk and water. Have the diluted milk and prune juice very cold. Add the juice slowly to the milk and pour over cracked ice. Serves six persons.

SOOR CHICKEN WITH SAVORY DUMPLINGS

A Real Treat for Persons Who Have Never Tasted This Combination.

Sour chicken is a real company dish with many families where it is always served on those occasions when the family relations meet to celebrate an anniversary or a birthday.

On such occasions sour chicken is generally served with delicious dumplings.

To prepare sour chicken take a fowl, weighing in the neighborhood of five or six pounds. Clean the fowl and cut up into pieces. Place in a pan and cover with one and one-half cup vinegar and two cups water to which has been added one onion, one teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon pepper, one bay leaf and one teaspoon cloves.

Allow the chicken to remain in this mixture for at least four hours. Then remove, wipe dry the pieces, roll in flour, place in a frying pan and brown fowl in three tablespoons butter.

When nicely brown, add two cups of the pickling mixture and simmer one hour.

At the end of the hour add one cup sour cream.

While the fowl is cooking, make the dumplings with two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt. Sift ingredients together and cut in three teaspoons butter with a fork.

Thin the flour mixture out with enough milk to thin the batter so that it may be dropped from a spoon. About a cup of milk will be sufficient.

Drop the batter on top of the cooked chicken, not allowing the batter to fall into the liquid in the bottom of the pan.

Cover the pan and cook about 15 minutes or until the dumplings are thoroughly steamed.

Remove fowl from pan to a hot platter. Surround meat with the dumplings and pour the gravy around the meat.

BLACKBERRY PUDDING MADE WITH THE CANNED PRODUCT

Canned Fruit Makes Very Delicious Hot and Cold Desserts.

Use a quart can blackberries. Rub the berries through a coarse strainer so that the seeds will be removed. Add one teaspoon lemon juice and three-fourths cup sugar to the juice and pulp and reheat to the boiling point.

Soak two tablespoons gelatin in one-half cup cold water. Or if preferred omit the sugar and lemon juice. Stir the gelatin into the juice and pulp and use a package of lemon flavored gelatin product instead of the plain.

There should be two cups of the blackberry juice, add boiling water if necessary to make up that amount. Stir the gelatin into the hot juice and when it is dissolved pour the mixture into a bowl to cool. If in a hurry, put the bowl in a pan of cracked ice. Stir the gelatin while cooling and when beginning to thicken beat with an egg beater until very thick and foamy.

Fold in two stiffly beaten egg whites and pour into individual molds or into a large one. Chill, turn out and serve with cream or a custard sauce made from the egg yolks.

EGGPLANT A LA CREOLE

Favorite Way of Preparing This Wholesome Vegetable.

Slice medium-sized eggplant crosswise. Peel and cut into inch dice. Cook in boiling salted water for 15 minutes, drain and put into a buttered hot dish.

Melt three tablespoons butter, add three tablespoons flour and stir until blended. Then add three large tomatoes, peeled and sliced, one small green pepper, shredded, one small onion thinly sliced, one teaspoon salt, a dash of bay leaf and two whole cloves.

Cook for five minutes, then pour over the egg plant and cover the top with a thin layer of buttered bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven for 30 minutes. Serve hot.

SPICED CUCUMBER RINGS

A Delightful Pickle Which Goes Well With Cold Meats.

Twelve medium cucumbers, two cups of sugar, four cups of vinegar, two tablespoons of whole cloves, two tablespoons of blade mace, one tablespoon of ginger root, one stick of cinnamon, two tablespoons of sweet red pepper, salt.

Parse, slice, and cut out seeds to leave a ring. Sprinkle with salt, let stand two hours, rinse with cold water, and cook in the other ingredients made into a pickling mixture, slowly, for 20 minutes.

Seal in sterilized jars and store in cool, dry place.

A-Bit of Information.
An entree is a light dish, which in formal course dinners is served after the fish, and before the meat, or heavier part of the dinner. It is usually a light meat, prepared and flavored delicately, but may be made of certain kinds of vegetables. At informal dinners and luncheons entrees are often used for the main course.

Fig Sandwiches.
Drain a can of figs or use cooked figs. Cut the figs and wash with a fork. Add to cream cheese and mix well together. Spread between buttered slices of whole wheat, graham or brown bread.

INDIVIDUAL SAUSAGE ROLLS

A Second Kind Is Good When Served With Sauerkraut.

Make a rather short biscuit dough and roll it rather thin. Cut out pieces of sufficient size to cover a single link of sausage. Fold the dough around the sausage having the side where the ends come together on the bottom.

Bake in a shallow tin in a slow oven for about 10 minutes or until the dough is well cooked.

German Sausage Roll.

One cup grated raw potato squeezed dry, two tablespoons soft butter, one-half teaspoon salt, a little pepper, one tablespoon flour, one teaspoon baking powder.

Have a pancake griddle well spread with bacon fat and bake the potato mixture in a large pan-cake, cover with sausage meat.

roll, tie into shape, and cook in a one hour. Pour the gravy over deep skillet over a slow fire about sauerkraut and lay the roll on top.

UNITED LUTHERANS TO RENEW DIVORCE POLICY DISCUSSION

Question of Liberalizing Stand of Church on Problem Before Convention Tomorrow

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 6.—The question of liberalizing its stand on divorce, long one of the controversial problems of the church, will be up for possible decision at the seventh biennial international convention of the United Lutheran Church of America here tomorrow.

The attitude of the United Lutherans, representing approximately half of the followers of Martin Luther in North America, has been divided for several years. Originally only one ground for divorce was recognized, adultery by the husband. Divorces granted on charges of desertion have brought for the contention it also is just cause.

Four years ago a committee, named to find a solution, recommended adoption of a rule recognizing desertion, but the convention overwhelmingly disapproved of the findings.

A proposed merger of four prominent Eastern theological seminaries controlled by synods affiliated with the church also may be determined. The proposed merger involves the Hartwick Seminary of Cooperstown, N. Y., the Mount Airy Seminary, Philadelphia; Gettysburg Seminary, located on the famous old battlefield, and the seminary attached to Susquehanna University at Selinsgrove, Pa.

NEW BERLIN SYNAGOGUE

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—The new synagogue of Berlin's Jewish congregation, situated in the Prinzregentstrasse, has just been consecrated. A striking feature is an iron curtain, which can be raised from the floor to cut off the apse, with its "Holy of Holies," and thus make the building available also for secular purposes, such as lectures and concerts.

This represents a return to tradition, for the ancient synagogues were at the same time centers of learning and meeting places of the congregation. The new synagogue has a monumental dome nearly 100 feet in diameter, the largest in Berlin. The main auditorium seats 1,000 persons.

"Lazy" Said the Boss "Acidity" Said the Doctor!

Charged with laziness—guilty simply of acidity! That's the situation with many men today. They realize that they are not themselves—they're conscious of a vague, tired feeling that's always with them—they know they have to pull themselves together for each and every task—but they can't tell what's the trouble. They're branded as lazy and ambitious when the real truth is that they're sick men—victims of acidity.

Acidity, due to our unnatural eating habits, irregular hours and other violations of Nature's laws, causes acid indigestion, with gas, sourness and burning. Also, it acts up fermentation and putrefaction in the intestinal tract, which forms poisons that sap our strength and vitality, irritate our nerves, spoil our sleep and make us weak, listless and chronically tired.

To correct acidity a remarkable new product has been developed by a 100-year-old pharmaceutical house in Germany. It comes in the form of small white tablets called Magnesia Oxidized, which do not have to be chewed but may be swallowed whole.

Magnesia Oxidized, upon contact with the acid in the stomach, generates nascent, or active oxygen. Now, active oxygen, as any doctor will tell you, when generated within the digestive tract, does just the thing required for acidity. It stimulates the secretion of the alkaline mucus. It checks the putrefaction and fermentation in the gastro-intestinal canal. It stimulates the activities of the intestinal walls and aids the natural movement of the bowels. All these effects are necessary to the true relief of acidity and Magnesia Oxidized supply them in a perfectly natural manner.

Make This Acidity Test

See for yourself how much acid has to do with your sleeplessness, your run-down condition and that persistent feeling of tiredness. Make this acidity test. Get a package of Magnesia Oxidized from Walgreen's Drug Stores or any other good drugstore. Take two after each meal. Note the pick-up in your pep and vigor. Mark the new peace in your stomach and nerves. If, after taking contents of one bottle, you don't feel decidedly better, return the bottle and the drugist will promptly and cheerfully refund your money.

EASTERN INTERESTS BEHIND PURCHASE OF KANSAS ROAD

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 6.—L. W. Warner, formerly of Topeka, who recently was announced as the purchaser of the Leavenworth & Topeka Railroad, negotiated the purchase at the suggestion of a group of Eastern men, according to Warner. He declined to name the men.

"Until I have their permission," Warner said, "I do not feel at liberty to divulge any plans they may have in connection with the L. & T. Railroad."

Sale of the railroad to Warner, said to be a Kansas City broker, for $400,000 was announced by E. H. Hogue, Kansas City, general counsel for the road. Warner also posted bond to insure operation of the road for the next six years.

Ohio-Mississippi Express Barges.

By the Associated Press. CINCINNATI, Ky., Oct. 6.—With 17 barges in tow, the steamer Ohio of the Mississippi Valley Barge Line Co. pulled away from the company's $500,000 terminal in Cincinnati at 1:30 p. m. yesterday on its maiden voyage to New Orleans.

Four hours later it had reached Mackville, a distance of 40 miles. Seven days will be required for the downstream trip. The Ohio is opening barge express service by the new transportation company between Cincinnati and New Orleans. Manufacturers who have shipped products on this tow are saving from 10 to 25 per cent under all-rail rates. # TEXT OF HOOVER SPEECH BEFORE CONVENTION OF FEDERATION OF LABOR sulted in destructive competition and in the breaking down of our social structure. The fact is that our country is in a state of social anarchy. All these conditions have culminated in a demoralization of the industry and a depth of human misery in some sections which is wholly out of place in our American system. The situation has been under investigation of our Government departments, by Congress, together with commissions and committees of one sort or another, for the past 10 years. The facts are known. One key to solution seems to me to lie in reduction of this destructive competition. It certainly is not the purpose of our competitive system that it should produce a competition which destroys jobs in an industry and reduces to poverty all those within it. Its purpose is rather to maintain that degree of competition which induces progress and protects the consumer. If our regulatory laws be at fault they should be revised.

"But most of these problems are problems of stability. With the job secure, other questions can be solved with much more assurance. You as workers know best of all how much a man gains from security in his job. It is the insurance of his manliness, it upholds the personal valuation of himself and of his family. To establish a system of security in this country is the supreme challenge to our responsibility as representatives of millions of our fellow workers and fellow citizens. The discharge of that responsibility does not allow present difficulties to rob us of our vision or the wholesome faith and courageous aggressive character for which our country has been long the leader of the world.

Increases Industrial Structure. "The demonstration of nationwide co-operation and team play and the absence of conflict during this depression have increased the stability and wholeness of our industrial and social structure. We are justified in feeling that we have just had a new improved tool has been added to the working kit for the solution of our future problems.

"No one would invite either war or business depression, but from them may come new inspirations. We find in these times courage and sympathy, generous helpfulness from our workpeople to those unfortunate suffering not alone from the present, but from fear for their future. We find inspiration in the courage of our employers, the resolution of the nation that we shall build steadily to prevent and mitigate the destructiveness of these great business storms. It is this inspiration which gives confidence for the future and confirms our belief in fundamental human righteousness and the value of our American conception of mutual duty of interest in our daily work."

Children Found Revolver in Auto, Parent of One Held

ARTHUR HARTER JR., 4 years old, of 5053 Mardel avenue, was shot in the right arm by a playmate yesterday after they had obtained a revolver from "an automobile parked near his home."

The weapon was fired by Jack, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Gieck, of 5073 Mardel avenue, police reported, after it had been handed to him by 2-year-old Jack Fiedler, who found it in the pocket of the car of his father, August Fiedler, 1824 Mardel street, who took the wounded child to St. John's Hospital. Fiedler told police he kept the revolver as a protection against vicious dogs. A warrant will be sought today charging him with carrying a concealed weapon and possessing an unregistered weapon.

Attempts to find her by radio and other means along the gulf coast since Sunday noon proved futile. Airplanes and fast ships were covering the gulf coast route while authorities were notified to conduct a hunt on land.

Mrs. said he was employed as a mechanic while earning his way through Ohio State University. He was not registered at the university at the time of the killing. Loren Weaver, William R. Braden, and Ralph Johnson were arrested for questioning. Police said Weaver told them Dominie was delivering five gallons of liquor to him when the shooting occurred.

During the year 1929, 475 cases were presented—approximately 8500 more than in the previous year. The increase was particularly noticeable in bankruptcy and other private suits.

The Government in 1930 brought 37,305 criminal cases of which 55,492 were charges of prohibition violation. Its civil actions numbered 24,934, with 11,832 related to prohibition. The figures all showed increases of some hundreds above the previous year. Of 25,849 criminal cases unsentenced at the end of June, 22,671 dealt with prohibition.

MEETING TO REORGANIZE LABOR PUBLISHING CO.

Organization 32 Years Old Issues St. Louis Labor and the Arbitrator Zeitung.

The Labor Publishing Co., 940 Chouteau avenue, which issues two weekly papers, St. Louis Labor and the Arbitrator Zeitung, will be reorganized at a meeting of stockholders tonight.

The company was organized in 1898 and was incorporated 10 years later with a capital of $15,000. More than half of the 500 original stockholders have died and labor unions holding stock lost interest, according to G. A. Hoehn, editor.

The reorganization is sponsored by local labor leaders headed by O. E. Jennings, international representative of the Electrical Workers' Union. A proposal to issue new stock and increase the scope of activities will be presented at the meeting by those behind the reorganization.

The company owns the three-story building it occupies, its assets being estimated in the last annual report at $35,000. Liabilities amount to about $18,000, including incumbrance on the property. Hoehn said. The combined circulation of the two papers is 20,000 copies weekly. The Arbitrator Zeitung lost its second-class mail privilege during the World War, resulting in a heavy financial loss. The privilege was later restored.

The boy left his home about 7:30 p. m. Saturday to play football and was last seen by companions as the scrimmage ended at 9:30. When he failed to return home before 10 o'clock his parents started a search.

Walts, a neighbor of the Fullers, continued the search yesterday and found the body near a camping place of tramps. Police rounded up about 15 hoboes but obtained no information.

Police think the slayer was a tramp who abducted the boy as he was on his way home.

STOCKS OPEN WITH PRICES ON DOWNTURN

Rapid Fading Out of the Rally From Last Week's Low and Unsettling Developments in Brazil Called Factors.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—With a fresh relapse in today's stock market, the bullish hopes engendered by last week's temporary checking of the protracted decline vanished.

Most of the recovery from the year's low level recorded by the averages last Tuesday was lost, and a long list of shares plunged to new low ground for the year or longer. The volume of trading was light, total sales falling short of 2,000,000 shares, but the market was virtually without support. A wide assortment of issues lost 2 to 8 points, and Allied Chemical was down 15.

The market was inclined to rally slightly at times, but the volume of trading was largest when the market was declining, and closing prices were in the main at virtual lows. The day's bottom levels were short-selling was in considerable volume, but brokers stated that much real liquidation of long holdings again seemed to be in progress.

Decline Unrelated to News.
The day's sharp decline was apparently unrelated to news developments. Probably the very lack of positive news from trade and industry was an aggravating factor. News over the week-end was not reassuring, and with the week's rally having shown signs of fading out on Saturday, speculative sentiment again turned darkly gloomy.

Spreading of the revolutionary movement in Brazil perhaps contributed to the unsettled condition of stocks. News was not entirely unfavorable, however. The Woolworth stores reported September sales slightly ahead of the 1929 figure. The Canadian Pacific reported a trip through the west in 1929, the first such showing since April, and President Beatty of the Canadian Pacific stated that a trip through the west by the Canadian Pacific had been highly reassuring as to the prospects for Canada's business next year.

which has been adversely affected by the news of unemployment in South America, dropped more than 6 points to a new low. International Telephone, however, lost only a fraction. Radio was under considerable pressure, dropping more than 2 points to a new low for the present session close to 25. United States Steel and American Telephone lost about 3 points, selling at the lowest since June.

Rails Hard Hit.
Rails were hard hit. Atchafalaya lost 5 points, and New York Central declined 3 to a new low. Utilities declined rapidly during the afternoon. American Water Works lost nearly 9 points, and North American 5. In the industrial, Westinghouse Electric tumbled 6 points, and American Can and DuPont, B. General Electric and General Motors each closed 2 points lower, and Woolworth lost 4 points, despite the better sales record for September.

Leading commodities were largely steady to firm. Wheat dropped 1 1/2 to 2 cents a bushel early, but rallied to close fractionally higher, on reports of a drought in Argentina, and a decrease in the visible supply. Bullish weather carried corn up nearly 2 cents a bushel. Cotton closed slightly lower.

Foreign exchanges were inclined to sag. The Brazilian milreis was a weak feature, dropping about 1/4 of 1 cent. Sterling cables were fairly steady at $4.86, off 1/32.

Many of the more popular shares are showing a decline in earnings ratios well above those reached in the 1920-21 bear market. There are still many leading stocks that are selling from 20 to more than 30 times this year's estimated earnings. Whether stocks are justified in selling at such levels remains a moot question. As this year's earnings are abnormally low, some present prices may be justified by prospects of improvement next year.

On the whole, stocks have been reduced to yield levels readily comparable to those of 1921. Moody's points out that the average yield of all dividend paying stocks on Sept. 30 was 7.91 per cent, or not far from the 8.68 per cent reached as of Nov. 13, 1929. While the figure 7.91 was substantially less than the 9.92 per cent reached in 1921, it is pointed out that credit conditions are radically different. Money is comparatively scarce and bonds of all grades commanded a substantially higher return in 1921. Moody's calculates that the present common stock yield is "relatively as high as it was in 1921."

Definite developments in the day's corporate news were limited. President Storey of Atchafalaya stated that low earnings had caused the company to cut dividends for the first time since 1921.

Call money again renewed at 2 per cent.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Total sales amounted to $3,566,000 compared with $3,140,000 Saturday, $11,561,000 a week ago and $3,654,000 a year ago. Total sales from Jan. 1, were $2,112,000,000 compared with $2,248,372,000 last year and $2,347,378,000 two years ago.

Quotations on all Liberty bonds are in dollars and thirty-seconds of a dollar. That is, for instance, a sale printed 99-24 means $99 and 24 thirty-seconds of a dollar, and not $99.24.

Following is a complete list of bonds traded in on the New York Stock Exchange today, giving sales, highest, lowest and closing prices. In sales, 000 omitted.

THE SAKHAI MURDER CASE S.S. VANDINE

CHAPTER XIII.

THE effect of this admission was astounding. Even Vance seemed momentarily shaken out of his habitual calm, and going to a small standard ashtray he abstractedly crushed out his cigarette, though he had smoked less than half of it.

Heath was the first to break the electric silence that followed Bliss' cry of anguish. He took his dead cigar from his lips, and thrust out his chin.

"Sure, they're your finger-prints!" he snapped unpleasantly. "Who else's would they be?"

"Just a moment, Sergeant!" Vance had wholly recovered himself, and his voice was casual. "Fingerprints can be very misleading. And a few digital signatures on a lethal weapon don't mean that their author is necessarily a murderer. It's most important, if you see, to ascertain when and under what circumstances the signatures were made."

He approached Bliss, who had remained staring at the statue of Sakhai like a stricken man. "I say, doctor," he had assumed an easy, offhand manner—"how do you know those finger-prints are yours?"

"How do I know?" Bliss repeated the question in a resigned, colorless tone. He appeared to have aged before our very eyes; and his white, sunken cheeks made him resemble a death's head. "Because—oh, my God!—because I made them! . . . I made them last night—or, rather, early this morning, before I turned in. I took hold of the statue—around the ankles—exactly where that gentleman says there are the marks of two hands."

"AND how did you happen to do that, doctor?" Vance asked quietly.

"I did it without thought—I'd even forgotten doing it till the finger-prints were mentioned," Bliss spoke with feverish earnestness; he seemed to feel that his very life depended on his being believed. "When I had finished arranging all the figures of the report early this morning, at about 8 o'clock, I came down here to the museum. I'd told Kyle about the new shipment, and I wanted to make sure that everything was in order for his inspection. . . . You see, Mr. Vance, a great deal depended on the impression the new treasures made on him. . . . I looked over the items in that end cabinet, and then I drew the curtain. Just as I was about to depart I noticed that the statue of Sakhai had not been placed evenly on the top of the cabinet—it was not in the exact center, and was slightly askew. So I reached up and straightened it—taking hold of it by the ankles. . . ."

"Then, . . . me for intruding, Vance,"—Scarlett, a troubled look on his face, had stepped forward—"but I can assure you that such an act was quite natural with Doctor Bliss. He's a stickler for orderliness—it's a good-natured joke among the rest of us. We never dare leave anything out of place; he's constantly criticizing us and rearranging things after us."

Vance nodded. "Then, as I understand you, Scarlett, if a statue was left a bit askew, it would be practically inevitable that Doctor Bliss, on seeing it, would set it right."

"Yes—I think that's a reasonable conclusion."

"Many thanks," Vance turned again to Bliss. "Your explanation is that you adjusted the statue of Sakhai, by taking hold of its ankles, and forthwith went to bed?"

"That's the truth—so help me God!" The man searched Vance's eyes eagerly. "I turned out the lights and went up stairs. And I've not set foot in the museum till you knocked on my study door."

Heath was obviously not satisfied with this story. It was plain that he had no intention of relinquishing his belief in Bliss' guilt.

"The trouble with that alibi," he retorted doggedly, "is that you haven't got any witnesses. And it's the sort of alibi anyone would pull when they've got caught with the goods."

MARKHAM diplomatically intervened. He himself was patently not convinced one way or the other.

"I think, Sergeant," he said, "that it might be advisable to have Capt. Dubois verify the identity of those finger-prints. We'll at least know definitely then if the prints are the ones Dr. Bliss made. Can you do that, Capt. Dubois?"

"Sure thing," Dubois reached in the handbag and drew forth a tiny inked roller, a narrow glass slab, and a small paper pad.

"I guess the thumb'll be enough," he said. "There's only one set of hands showing on the statue."

He ran the inked roller over the glass slab, and going to Bliss, asked him to hold out his hand.

"From your thumb on the ink and then put 'em down on this paper," he ordered.

Bliss complied without a word; and when the impressions had been made Dubois again placed the glass slab in his eye and inspected the marks.

A FORECAST OF THE WINTER STYLES

The Man Who Has Designed Gowns for Many V. P. Queens and Maids of Honor Discusses the Trend of the 1930 Mode and Tells How New Ideas Must Be Adapted to Personality of the Wearer.

BY MARGUERITE MARTYN

THERE is no such thing as an arbitrary style. Each season's modes has its earmarks to identify and distinguish it from last season's, but every mode is capable of adaptation to the individual wearer. It is the interpretation of the mode, adaptation to the wearer's particular style of beauty, or lack of beauty, bringing out her best points and minimizing her worst, and putting the costume to the occasion for which it is intended and to the wearer's worldly status—these are the constituents of style.

It is the man who for more than 10 years has designed and in most cases made the costumes of each succeeding V. P. Queen who has only two or three. Samuel Garth Harrison, who is speaking, Every woman in St. Louis who aspires to be well dressed knows or has heard of Harrison, the dressmaker; not all know him as the maker of the costume of the Queen and her retinue, in so much secrecy is this occupation. He is a man who has been in the business almost every year since he came to St. Louis from a small Missouri town, upon this peculiar genius has developed the responsibility of making the regal procession the thing of harmony as well as a dazzling splendor which it always is.

"Designing for this pageant has proved to be an art separate from the making of other elaborate ceremonial gowns," said he, "and of the theatrical costume, however skilled. Occasionally I have gone shopping in Paris with a prospective Queen or special maid of honor, who, wanted to import her gown, but the couturiers over there, no matter how carefully the matter is explained to them, never grasp the situation at all. You see, our V. P. Queen's ball is the greatest thing of its kind in the world. New Orleans' Mardi Gras doesn't compare with it."

"The nearest the French creators get to a conception of it is a court or coronation scene. That is all right as far as it goes but the V. P. spectacle has other requirements and limitations. It takes place in an enormous arena before an enormous audience. The gowns must fill the vast space and the collector's eye of the multitude. Therefore they must be striking in color, scheme, in silhouette, in ornamentation. That is not an impossible task with the wealth of materials that the person who killed Mr. Kyle actually wielded the statue?" Heath gave Vance a look of amazement.

"Say! You don't seriously think, do you, that this lion-headed dame did the job by herself—like this Yogi says? He jerked his thumb at Hans without turning his eyes."

"You detective is fully justified in his opinion," he said. "I can see his point of view. Everything is against me—everything!" His tone, though flat and colorless, was bitter. "If only I hadn't fallen asleep this morning, I'd know the meaning of all this. . . . My scrub-pin, that financial report, those finger-prints. . . . He shook his head like a man in a daze. "It's damnable—damnable!" His trembling hands went to his face, and he placed his elbows on his knees, bending forward in an attitude of utter despair.

"It's too damnable, doctor," Vance replied soothingly. "Therein lies our hope of a solution."

Again he walked to the cabinet and remained for some time in distracted contemplation. Hans had returned to his accented adoration of Teal-shirt and Scarlett, frowning and unhappy, was pacing nervously up and down between the detective's state chair and the shelves holding the shawls. Markham stood in a brown study, his hands clasped behind him, gazing at the shaft of sunshine which had fallen diagonally through the high rear window.

I noted that Hennessy had silently entered the main door and taken his post on the stair landing, up and down between the detective's state chair and the shelves holding the shawls. Markham stood in a brown study, his hands clasped behind him, gazing at the shaft of sunshine which had fallen diagonally through the high rear window.

"Excuse me, gentlemen!" Heath had suddenly become animated. "I gotta see Hennessy—I'll be back in a minute." And he stalked with vigorous determination to the front door and disappeared.

we have at our disposal. But it is not so easy to make them striking, eye-filling, and at the same time keep them from becoming tawdry, make them splendid without being garish. They are expected to partake of the pageantry, to reflect somewhat the atmosphere of the Oriental setting but people also have come to expect the gowns of the queen and her special maids to conform with prevailing modes and introduce new trends."

Apparently Mr. Harrison has made it an art so much his own that it gives him little trouble. He dismisses the subject lightly. It was on the matter of clothes in general and the new modes in particular that he preferred to express his views—every syllable of which I am sure womenkind will hang upon, coming from this source of authority just now when they are planning a new season's wardrobe.

He has just returned from his annual trip to Paris and while I have heard him expound his philosophy before—on selecting from the mode and adaptation to individual type—never have I known him so enthusiastic over what Paris has to offer.

"We are getting back to styles in which we really can express the best which is in us," he declared. "Short skirts and straight lines never really were a fashion. Following the war American buyers went over to find all Paris that was visible wearing war work clothes. Of course the real Parisienne never in visible or never wears her choicest gowns in public places. Skimpy frocks were most in vogue because factories had not yet begun to function and anyway economy was the watchword of the hour. Buyers assumed these things, but the couturiers with native shrewdness were just smart enough to let them have it so. It wasn't art, it was business."

LISS, to all appearances, had taken no interest in this discussion of his possible guilt. He had sunk back in his chair, where he sat staring unseeingly at the floor—a tragic, broken figure. When the Sergeant had left he moved his head slowly toward Vance.

"The problem is not to dispose of these original French models but to find just the right customer for the dress," resumed Mr. Harrison. "There will be plenty to buy them just because they are pretty. That's where all the money is tied up today. People buy things they have no use for. I don't care if I never dispose of my original models, although right now they are going out faster than they come in. I buy them for the inspiration they give me. I much prefer to create for the individual customer."

"My rule of procedure is, first see my material, next see my customer, next know the occasion for which the gown is intended. Then I see my dress, visualize the whole thing in my mind's eye. The effort is always to have the client unreasoned rather than over-dressed. It isn't necessarily what the customer wants but what she must have. A portrait painter can flatter his sitter, pretty her up, but he isn't a portrait painter unless he retains her likeness, her soul, her character. It is the same with designing her habiliments."

It is always anything to see Mr. Harrison displaying a dainty frock, spreading it out against his many frames. For there is nothing effeminate about the creator of women's clothes. His affluence no woman made himself, though an interesting color sense usually manifests itself in his choice of accessories. This making a virtue of necessity. No real artist ever conceived these styles. Heads, says this authority, have never been so good, not even during their vogue a few years back. The next gown shown has a bodice solidly beaded in a diamond pattern blending from white to gray and black as it goes, a fluffy, long skirt of black chiffon cut in petal lengths.

Of baby blue satin is the next frock describing the most popular of the new silhouettes with short fitted bodice and long, flaring skirt. Its sole adornment besides a rhinestone accent of the diagonal neckline is in tucks and the accordion pleating of its skirt.

Several lace frocks were shown, especially magnificent those of 14-carat gold thread lace, some with a copper tinge. A lace frock built on Empire lines is sketched, the pattern of the filmy lime green lace outlined with iridescent crystal sequins. It has a matching short cape coat of three graduated circular tiers in silk green velvet lined with silver.

"No, I do not draw my designs any more," he responded to a query. "My staff has learned to understand my slightest instruction. As the garment progresses I detect the flaws, if any. If a single detail is wrong, a single line out of harmony, it grates upon me as I imagine a discord does on a musician."

A portrait painter can flatter his sitter, pretty her up, but he isn't a portrait painter unless he retains her likeness, her soul, her character. It is the same with designing her habiliments."

It is always anything to see Mr. Harrison displaying a dainty frock, spreading it out against his many frames. For there is nothing effeminate about the creator of women's clothes. morning a tawny shirt was complemented with a dull silk tie in an old gold shade.

"No, I do not draw my designs any more," he responded to a query. "My staff has learned to understand my slightest instruction. As the garment progresses I detect the flaws, if any. If a single detail is wrong, a single line out of harmony, it grates upon me as I imagine a discord does on a musician."

A model which has just been unpacked was the gown illustrated at the left of heavy gros grain silk in an old shade of rose shade. It was built of two circular flounces, the lower one sweeping the floor all around, attached to a tight-fitting shirred bodice. A coat to go with it (illustrated at its left) of the same shade of velvet, had a floral border worn in of the same erect pile in tinsel silver thread. The long enveloping cape next in the sketch, of black Lyons velvet, merged into a circular flounce trailing at the back.

Heads, says this authority, have never been so good, not even during their vogue a few years back. The next gown shown has a bodice solidly beaded in a diamond pattern blending from white to gray and black as it goes, a fluffy, long skirt of black chiffon cut in petal lengths.

Of baby blue satin is the next frock describing the most popular of the new silhouettes with short fitted bodice and long, flaring skirt. Its sole adornment besides a rhinestone accent of the diagonal neckline is in tucks and the accordion pleating of its skirt.

Several lace frocks were shown, especially magnificent those of 14-carat gold thread lace, some with a copper tinge. A lace frock built on Empire lines is sketched, the pattern of the filmy lime green lace outlined with iridescent crystal sequins. It has a matching short cape coat of three graduated circular tiers in silk green velvet lined with silver.

"The problem is not to dispose of these original French models but to find just the right customer for the dress," resumed Mr. Harrison. "There will be plenty to buy them just because they are pretty. That's where all the money is tied up today. People buy things they have no use for. I don't care if I never dispose of my original models, although right now they are going out faster than they come in. I buy them for the inspiration they give me. I much prefer to create for the individual customer."

The Ideal Food.

Many a patented food article lays claim to being the ideal food.

But the only food substance that can win any justice lay claim to this title is milk.

Milk is a most important, it is the most important, of all human foods. Its composition is such that man could practically live upon it without any other substance.

From the viewpoint of digestibility, milk is food in an ideal condition. From an economic viewpoint, milk gives more fuel per unit cost than practically all other foods.

Milk ordinarily contains about 87 per cent of water, and 12 per cent solids. It is the solids in milk that are valuable, though their suspension or solution in the water is important.

Of the 12 per cent solids, approximately 3 1/2 per cent is fat and 4 1/2 per cent is 5 per cent milk sugar. Milk also contains valuable mineral salts which are useful to the body.

In most communities where the production and distribution of milk is supervised milk is classified in grades A, B and C.

Contrary to the common impression these gradations are not based upon the fat contents of the milk, but on the number of bacteria found in a cubic centimeter of milk.

While milk is an ideal food it is also a dangerous food—dangerous if handled in an unsanitary manner. To be on the safe side, milk should be pasteurized, and if pasteurization is not feasible it should be brought to the boiling point and quickly cooled.

Even pasteurized or boiled milk, if not stored properly and kept cool, may become contaminated with disease germs and produce illness.

WE had gone straight to the up her arrangement with the talk, too much smoke, too alone in a small apartment downtown, after telephoning to see if, rebellious of change, and vainly to hush his crying as the driver indifferent, slouching on Gertrude opened the door of a first-floor flat, and without a word instructing the driver bring in the bags and things.

When he had gone she put Jun down on a couch and faced it friend.

"What's wrong? You did explain!"

"I've left Stephen. We quarrel. You won't ask me what about, you?" begged Eve pitifully.

"No," answered Gertrude, won't.

"May we stay here, Junior?" I, until I can find a room, a someone to look out for him while I go to work?"

"You may. There's the bed down, there; and we'll get a cot for him," Gertrude told her, sturdily.

"I left his crib," Eve wearily. "A basket would do."

"Tired. He's a very good baby," Gertrude. He won't bother you much."

Junior lay and stared at the ceiling with round eyes. He was interested in his new surroundings; he forgot to cry. He rather liked the woman who came now and stood over him and made vague, chuckling noises at him and touched, rather timidly, his fat, pink hand.

"I brought," Eve went on, formula—what I had made up. He would order milk!"

She took her head between her hands and sat there, slack in a big chair. Gertrude went over to her.

"Get your clothes off," she ordered, brusquely tender. "and make up the couch for you and your young toast and tea. You're in. I'll see to the baby's crib and his milk and everything. Don't talk to talk. Don't try to think. Let me do both if you want. But not now. When Eve had carried out the program, she dolefully concluded that Junior was sleeping, for the moment, in an extemporized bed consisting of two cushioned chairs pushed close together. Eve said suddenly:

"I must get work. That's important thing. And find some one to look after Junior while I'm away."

"I know the very person," Gertrude told her, practically. "I'll clean for me and told me recently she would like more work. She's reliable, Eve, and I know she'll be glad to stay. I'll speak to her of the telephone tonight."

"You're good," said Eve, fairly.

Gertrude's keen eyes were moist. But she said, impatiently: "Don't be silly. We're friends, aren't we? Eve, I'm sorry—you've had a rotten time. I've been working in the bank. Please know that. But is it hopeless, can't be remedied somehow? You love him, you know."

"If I didn't, it would be easy to forgive him," Eve said. "It's all such a muddle. Gertrude, Remedied? Perhaps, but I don't know that I want a patched-up happiness," said Eve, with a rising flame in her cheeks.

"Perhaps," Gertrude told her, "but most people's happiness seems just that way to me—patched places."

THREE days later Eve was working in Gertrude's bank where a temporary position had been offered her. She filled in place of an absent valuable secretary to one of the executives, a woman who was very slowly recuperating from a serious operation. Later, Eve was told, another place might be found for her—permanent one.

Junior transferred his affection from his lost Anna to the expensively cooled Mrs. Hastings, and the little household shook down in running order. Gertrude had persuaded her friend to stay for a time. When things were settled, Eve wrote Stephen.

"We are with Gertrude," she told him, and well taken care of. I'm working in the bank. Please don't try to see me now. When feel able to talk things over, perhaps we'll meet."

Her mother would have to be told. Stephen, when her letter reached him, forwarded some money to her. He could not write, he said. There was only one thing he could say. It was: "Forgive me, come back to me." And he could say it yet. Things were too uncertain between them. The couldn't be solved by six words. Life wasn't as simple as that. He loved her. He suffered damnably. He hated himself for what he had

CHAPTER 40.

EVER had gone straight to Gertrude Evans. Gertrude had given up her arrangement with the other girls in her bank—"too much talk, too much smoke, too many complications"—and was living alone in a small apartment downtown. Eve went directly there in a taxi, after telephoning to see if her friend was in. Junior was fretful, rebellious of change, and she held him in her arms and tried vainly to hush his crying as the car rattled through the streets, the driver indifferent, slouched on his seat.

Gertrude opened the door of her first-floor flat, and without a word began instructing the driver to bring in the bags and things.

When he had gone she put Junior down on a couch and faced her friend.

"Well, what's wrong? You didn't explain." "I've left Stephen. We quarreled. You won't ask me what about, will you?" begged Eve pitifully.

In MOVIE LAND It's the MAN WHO PAYS and PAYS

Cliff Edwards, who offered to sing his wife a song in lieu of alimony.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 5. A LITTLE slip of yellow paper lay on a desk before Charlie Chaplin in his Hollywood studio office the other day. On it were written both words and figures addressed to a banking house. Tersely, brief and to the point were certain instructions.

"Pay to the order of," they began. Nothing new in the words. But the written line which followed carried the jolt.

"One Hundred and Fifty Thousand and no dollars," it said.

One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars, the residue of a $255,000 cash alimony payment to Lita Grey Chaplin, the comedian's divorced wife. For two more years Chaplin will pay Lita $1000 a month, then he will establish a trust fund of $200,000 and the estate will be clean. Nine Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars for a wife of less than two years. Of this the actress gets $255,000. The rest is hers.

Chaplin read the check over carefully. Then he signed his name and another chapter was ended in the love affairs of the temperamental comedian. He had paid $107,500 to terminate his earlier marriage to Mildred Harris, so his two voyages into the field of romance soon will have cost him more than a million dollars—yet he still lives alone in his Beverly Hills mansion.

Hollywood is said to be the Garden of Allah (money). In it more huge sums have been and are being paid to ex-wives than in any small municipality on earth. When a big, high-powered leading man gets his fateful legal summons to divorce court he says: "Oh, oh! Here's where I get mine." He knows he's in for it. There is no discrimination. Scenario writers, decorators, stars and producers have to pay and pay and pay: a few pay "not for just an hour, not for just a day, not for just a year, but always."

SOME months ago Carey A. Wilson, widely known scenarist, looked at a document before him, just as Charlie Chaplin had looked at his check. The contract, painstakingly drawn up in legal form, had a dotted line for his signature. By it he transferred to his wife, Nancy, his home in Benedict Canyon which had cost more than $100,000. In addition it provided that he should pay her $500 a month alimony for a year, give her title to the $18,000 automobile and provide $250 a month for the support of his two children.

All he would have left, he found, was a $20,000 equity in a piece of real estate. He read the agreement through slowly and carefully. The love of his wife was gone. Now he was turning his back upon his few remaining possessions. He must find another place to live.

Ronald Colman, romantic star of the silver screen, is another who pays and pays. He doesn't tell how much. But back in 1925 Mrs. Theima Colman suddenly appeared in Hollywood from Italy and filed a suit for separate maintenance, demanding $1000 a month and one-half of the community property.

She went to a theater soon after her arrival and sat not more than three feet from her husband. Presently he saw her and crumpled, she said. Negotiations were begun between their attorneys. The separate maintenance suit was dropped. Mrs. Colman returned to England. Recently Mr. Colman remarked that he still is married. Mrs. Colman remains abroad. The lines. He lifted his hand, beckoned. "Come in."

SHE vaguely recalled, afterwards, being presented to the nurses. Then she was alone with him. She sat stiffly on a straight chair and tried to absorb him. She had every reason for detestation. Through Bedford she had come to incredible grief.

Bedford said, smiling: "Nice men, all around. I don't suppose you'll believe me when I tell you I wasn't myself—that day. I had one of my headaches. Hell, a mild word for them, you know. I was—rather out of my mind. Eve, I meant you no harm."

She said, low: "When you tell—I shouldn't amount she plucks from the garden of alimony is not known.

Bernard P. Fineman married Evelyn Brent in New York City Nov. 21, 1922. They separated in 1925 and she sued for divorce in 1927. And Mr. Fineman began to pay. He still is paying, unless some lump settlement has been reached. Mr. Fineman contracted to give Miss Brent $200 a week for five years, a total of $52,000. This arrangement will expire in 1927.

In addition he agreed to insure his life in her favor for $50,000 and deliver to her jewelry, stocks and bonds in an amount unknown. The total amount of her "harvest" has not been revealed because the value of the jewelry, stocks and bonds has never been listed. Since the settlement Miss Brent has again married.

JOHN GILBERT is through paying Leatrice Joy her $156,000 alimony but he must dig up $2500 a year until their child is 18 years of age.

William S. Hart has completed his $200,000 settlement with Winifred Westover. Adolphe Menjou has finished paying his first wife, Kathryn, $67,500 at the rate of $550 a week. In their divorce arrangement he gave her $25,000 cash, a $75,000 home on Doheny drive and the $550 weekly payment consideration. The total $167,500 deal is consummated. When the negotiations were completed, Adolphe's attorneys said he was left "almost penniless."

On the radio and screen, has been battling in the courts over a $104,000 settlement he made on his wife, Mrs. Irene L. Edwards, when they separated last year. He said in his suit that in the agreement, he promised to conduct herself properly, but hasn't done so. He sought to restrain her from disposing of the property he had given her.

While preparing a divorce complaint, he remarked, "we have no children, but I'm going to sue for the custody of our dog."

When Mrs. Edwards, seeking $250 per week alimony, told of his earnings as a singer, he made an offer. "If my wife thinks my songs are so valuable, I'll sing her one or two for alimony."

Mrs. Edwards insisted she had to have that $250 a week to maintain her social position and keep up appearances as Mrs. Cliff Edwards.

"Don't call me 'mistress' and don't call me 'Clifford,'" he retorted. "I'm just plain Ukulele Ike and although my voice goes into the best of homes on the radio, I've got no social standing whatever."

CHARLES F. MCGREW, third son of a Chicago attorney, is paying Jean Harlow, heroine of Hell's Angels, $375 a month from a $200,000 trust fund established in 1927. Joseph Schildkraut is paying his divorced wife Elsie Bartlett, $250 a week alimony and will be paying it until about June, 1932. That's better than $1000 a month.

The well-known divorcee in Hollywood needs $20,000 a year on which to live, according to Mrs. Christine Aaronson, wife of the celebrated orchestra leader, Irving Aaronson. In her suit for separate maintenance recently filed, she lists the following as monthly necessities:

Rent, $200; tips, $50; cook and maid, $100; laundry, $25; dry cleaning, $50; food, $200; clothing, $750; entertainment at home and club, $150; automobile and chauffeur, $200; estimated doctor bill,

Screen Actors, Writers and Directors Pay Huge Sums Each Year to Former Wives—Divorce Cost Chaplin More Than a Million—Hart Paid $200,000 and Menjou Spent $167,500.

It keeps ex-husbands hustling sometimes to meet their alimony payments. Lloyd Hamilton was haled into court to tell why he was behind $7500 due his first wife while his second wife was suing for divorce in another division of the same court. The latter accepted $1250 cash in lieu of further alimony.

Cullen Landis contracted to pay his first wife $500 a month and place a $20,000 piece of real estate in trust for his two children. That $500 a month has had him in and out of jail since 1927. At one time he was sentenced by a Los Angeles Judge to sleep five nights in jail and spend the intervening days looking for a job.

A. L. ST. JOHN is another who manages to keep about two jumps ahead of the process servers. They had him in jail once last year.

"He can stay there until he pays up his alimony debts even if it's the rest of his natural life," said Judge Charles Burnell.

"I've done my best," Al replied. "I've made an honest effort." As he was being led away by a bailiff, he turned to Judge St. John, his second wife, and said, "Keep the light burning in the window for me, honey. Maybe, some day I'll be back."

Al was $3500 in arrears, his first wife's attorneys declared. In August of this year he still was $1000 behind.

HUSBAND'S LOW INCOMES FORCE WIVES TO WORK

WHILE women workers often have been accused of taking jobs that could be filled by men who needed them, most wage-earning mothers work because their husbands do not make enough money to support their families decently.

A study of 550 mothers engaged in wage-earning occupations in Cleveland, O., discloses, the department of labor says, that a large majority work because of economic necessity.

Of the 295 women whose husbands were living with their wives, 119 women were widows, 62 were divorced and 46 had been deserted.

In 15 cases the husbands were in institutions.

Of the 295 women whose husbands were living at home, 137 said that their reason for going to work was the insufficient income of the husbands.

Personal preference was the reason of 24 while the husbands of 23 were ill and the husbands of 26 were jobless.

In 80 per cent of the cases where insufficient income was given as the reason, the husbands received less than $30 a week. The families studied averaged 2.3 children.

Most of the 550 women were doing fulltime work away from home, with 24 of them in domestic work or personal service.

Factories gave employment to 224 others, 51 were saleswomen in stores, 17 were office workers, six were in professional occupations and 45 were employed at night.

More than half of all the women did all of the laundry work themselves. Fifty mothers sent the children to a nursery while they worked, 99 had them cared for at home by relatives or friends and 133 said nobody took care of them.

Cliff Edwards, known as Ukulele Ike on the radio and screen, has been battling in the courts over a $104,000 settlement he made on his wife, Mrs. Irene L. Edwards, when they separated last year. He said in his suit that in the agreement, he promised to conduct herself properly, but hasn't done so. He sought to restrain her from disposing of the property he had given her.

CHARLES F. MCGREW, third son of a Chicago attorney, is paying Jean Harlow, heroine of Hell's Angels, $375 a month from a $200,000 trust fund established in 1927. Joseph Schildkraut is paying his divorced wife Elsie Bartlett, $250 a week alimony and will be paying it until about June, 1932. That's better than $1000 a month.

The well-known divorcee in Hollywood needs $20,000 a year on which to live, according to Mrs. Christine Aaronson, wife of the celebrated orchestra leader, Irving Aaronson. In her suit for separate maintenance recently filed, she lists the following as monthly necessities:

Rent, $200; tips, $50; cook and maid, $100; laundry, $25; dry cleaning, $50; food, $200; clothing, $750; entertainment at home and club, $150; automobile and chauffeur, $200; estimated doctor bill,

amount she plucks from the garden of alimony is not known.

Bernard P. Fineman married Evelyn Brent in New York City Nov. 21, 1922. They separated in 1925 and she sued for divorce in 1927. And Mr. Fineman began to pay. He still is paying, unless some lump settlement has been reached. Mr. Fineman contracted to give Miss Brent $200 a week for five years, a total of $52,000. This arrangement will expire in 1927.

In addition he agreed to insure his life in her favor for $50,000 and deliver to her jewelry, stocks and bonds in an amount unknown. The total amount of her "harvest" has not been revealed because the value of the jewelry, stocks and bonds has never been listed. Since the settlement Miss Brent has again married.

JOHN GILBERT is through paying Leatrice Joy her $156,000 alimony but he must dig up $2500 a year until their child is 18 years of age.

William S. Hart has completed his $200,000 settlement with Winifred Westover. Adolphe Menjou has finished paying his first wife, Kathryn, $67,500 at the rate of $550 a week. In their divorce arrangement he gave her $25,000 cash, a $75,000 home on Doheny drive and the $550 weekly payment consideration. The total $167,500 deal is consummated. When the negotiations were completed, Adolphe's attorneys said he was left "almost penniless."

On the radio and screen, has been battling in the courts over a $104,000 settlement he made on his wife, Mrs. Irene L. Edwards, when they separated last year. He said in his suit that in the agreement, he promised to conduct herself properly, but hasn't done so. He sought to restrain her from disposing of the property he had given her.

While preparing a divorce complaint, he remarked, "we have no children, but I'm going to sue for the custody of our dog."

When Mrs. Edwards, seeking $250 per week alimony, told of his earnings as a singer, he made an offer. "If my wife thinks my songs are so valuable, I'll sing her one or two for alimony."

Mrs. Edwards insisted she had to have that $250 a week to maintain her social position and keep up appearances as Mrs. Cliff Edwards.

"Don't call me 'mistress' and don't call me 'Clifford,'" he retorted. "I'm just plain Ukulele Ike and although my voice goes into the best of homes on the radio, I've got no social standing whatever."

So, for the moment, the $104,000 is tied up.

PRESIDENT OF STATE TO TAKE COMMAND

Government Reports Movements in Para, to North, and Parana, to South, Overcome Without Bloodshed: Will Call Reserves.

By the Associated Press.
RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 7.—The Government announced late today that the revolutionary movement in the State of Para, to the north, and in Parana, in the south, had been overcome without bloodshed. It was added that part of the navy had gone to southern ports, where the trouble began last week, and one unit to Pernambuco, on the northern coast. Government spokesmen said they were certain the entire fleet would back the administration, and that the 10,000 troops in the local district would remain loyal.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The confidence of the Brazilian Government that it will speedily suppress the revolutionary movement was expressed today in messages from Rio de Janeiro. The wide separation of the rebel forces and the fact they have had no complete successes were cited.

An attack on American property by Brazilian Revolutionists in the city of Bahia over the week-end was reported to the State Department today by S. Walter Washington, American Charge d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro.

The American-owned street car service and the elevator service between the upper and lower levels of the city were attacked Saturday and Sunday but State police were understood to have driven off the revolutionists. Offices of the service company at Rio were informed, the charge added, that the damage was not as great as was first reported and it has been announced that the service in Bahia will be resumed tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.
MONTVIDEO, Uruguay, Oct. 7. Revolutionary armies moved today toward the two largest cities of Brazil, gathering force as they traveled for what their leaders thought would be decisive battles.

Leaders of the rebel movement planned to divide the armies of the State of Rio Grande do Sul, which is committed heart and soul to the revolution, sending one section against Sao Paulo, coffee-exporting center, and the other against Lito Janeiro. The second section will await forces from the states of Minas Gerais, Ceara, Pernambuco, Piahy and Rio Grande do Norte before attacking the capital city.

Getulio Vargas, president of the State of Rio Grande do Sul and defeated candidate for the national presidency, has delegated responsibilities of his State office to Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, Minister of Interior, and will take personal command of the southern revolutionary armies.

The newspaper Republicano at Santa Ana da Livramento says radiograms from the front announce arrival of the rebel vanguard at the border of the State of Sao Paulo, not far from where Federal troops are gathering, for defense of the important port. Troops from Santa Catarina and Parana are assembling with the insurgents for the invasion of Sao Paulo.

Reports from Rivera, frontier town, say a battalion of the Sixteenth Infantry at Sao Paulo has been reinforced. It is said also that Fort Copacabana was assaulted Sunday by rebels.

Telegrams from Rio Branco, a Uruguayan city just across the Jaguar River from the Brazilian city of Jaguarao, state the entire garrison there has joined the revolutionary movement. The garrison included a corps of engineers, whose service will be very helpful in the march across the difficult terrain leading to Sao Paulo. Four officers, a Major, two Captains and a Lieutenant who refused to join the rebels were permitted to go to Rio Branco, in Uruguay.
